Today's Date in the Wheel of the Year

18 October

Feast day of Pandrosos, the all-refreshing one (the all-dewy one), ancient Greece First priestess of Minerva (Pallas Athena), Pandrosos: literally 'the all-dewy one'. She was a daughter of Cecrops, a legendary king of Athens. Her sisters by him were Herse, and Aglaurus. She was the deified first priestess of Minerva.

Pandrosus and Hermes had a son, Ceryx.

Birthday in 1616 of Nicholas Culpeper (d. 1654), English botanist, herbalist, physician and astrologer, author of The English Physitian (1652).

Birthday in 1911 of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, guru

This and much more can be found in our new group

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/DeitiesCelebrations/>

We will be posting information here in the Correllian Herald on Mondays and Thursdays for that date. For daily and monthly information on Gods, Goddesses and Celebrations the World over, please feel free to join the group. If you have anything to add to the files they are welcome, too! We look forward to seeing you there!

Runes
By Gothi Freyatrú

*Do you know how to carve, do you know how to interpret,
Do you know how to stain, do you know how to test out,
Do you know how to ask, do you know how to sacrifice,
Do you know how to dispatch, do you know how to slaughter?*

Sayings of the high one v144 Trans Carolyne Larrington 1996

I am hearing you all thinking: 'That's the same verse as last week!' Well you are all quite correct, it is. Ten out of ten for observation!

Last week I talked about the ethics involved in using runes, and the conflicts behind a system of magic containing a strong element of attack and the Wiccan Rede. However before you ever get that far, you have to know how to do the things in the first two lines of the stanza. In a way it was a warning not to run before you can even sit up straight let alone crawl. This week I will talk about the level of knowledge needed to be a Vitki, or rune magician.

I am not talking about simply using runes for divination. Anyone can have relative success with the fluffiest set of mass produced runes complete with descriptions of the meanings. Be it the 20th Century 25 rune futhark or the Armenen row.

A Vitki however understands that the most power comes from a Futhark which you have made yourself. Your own essence is put into the runes which you carve. As I said last week, simply the act of carving a rune in the right manner is a spell in itself. All your manipulation of energy is done during that process.

There is a whole world of skill involved in finding a branch while out walking and turning it into a finished rune stave. Firstly and most important is: finding a stick which is the right size and isn't too rotten. Some people will harvest direct from a living tree, which cuts out the worry of the wood being rotten. In its place however you get the hassle of drying out the wood before you can use it and worrying about it warping or splitting as it dries. All this can only be learnt through trial and error, taking time and experience to get right.

Then there is finding wood from a tree which is appropriate for the use you want to put your rune to. Futharks made for divination are best made from fruit bearing trees, Apple, cherry or pear for example are all trees which are good to use for making an entire Futhark. In addition to this Yew is useful as the Yew tree is equated to Yggdrasil. Yggdrasil is not just a world tree but a universe tree connecting the nine worlds of Norse mythology. This again demonstrates that that Heathenry is another area in which it is useful to be knowledgeable, even if you are not actually a Heathen yourself. One of my most outstanding apprentices who has just completed the advanced course in runes has an Egyptian Goddess as her patron.

All this knowledge and you haven't even begun to carve or stain your rune yet! Well I have to have something to write about next week don't I?

Animals and Astrology

Jonathan Keyes

I like to take off into the Olympic Mountains in the summer time and hike along the long stream beds and valleys up the hills and small mountains. The tremendous amount of rainfall helps create one of the most magnificent temperate rain forests in the world. The Olympics create an incredible environment for a diverse array of animal life to grow and thrive. These animals teach me many lessons as I walk with them. The bear teaches me to be slower and more attentive. The eagle teaches me to be stronger and to see with clear vision. Each animal carries itself in a certain way that enlightens and heals me when I pay attention.

These animals can act as powerful allies and healers of our souls if we take the time to watch them and take their spirit into our hearts. Many indigenous tribal peoples view animals as powerful spiritual entities with much to teach. I once witnessed a Quichua Indian shaman from Ecuador taking on the attributes of a jaguar while doing healing work. Coastal Indians have had profound reverence for whales for thousands of years. The whale not only is a source of food and fuel, but also is a form of spiritual sustenance for the entire tribe.

Animals and Astrology

When I take the time to observe these animals' habits, I notice their natural affinity to the various elements and planets we study in astrology. Birds have a strong connection to the air element, and seals and whales have an association with the water element. But when we study the animals a little more deeply, we can see how their characteristics attune to different planets as well. Though dolphins may have a basic affinity to the water element, their playfulness and communicative style link them to the planet Mercury. And though great blue herons are connected to air, their graceful majesty and large stature shows their Jupiterian nature.

Each environment produces its own diversity of animal life, and the climate will help attune animals to a certain disposition. A dry, sunny region, like the canyons of southern Utah, will naturally have more fiery animals like lizards and reptiles. Windswept plains and tall gusty crags will have creatures that are connected to the air element, such as ravens, hawks and eagles.

Animals as Medicine.

When we learn about an animal through studying, watching and reading about it, we can discover what it has to teach. Perhaps the lesson is about steadfastness and perseverance (buffalo). Or perhaps the lesson they have to teach is about agility and speed (hummingbird). In each case, we can emulate their abilities so we may grow stronger and wiser ourselves.

Often it is helpful to work with an animal that connects with our astrological chart. If we have a predominance of fire planets, we may want to work with a fiery animal to learn how to better access our own innate energy. We may also want to work with an animal that balances our chart and strengthens an element we are missing. If we have a lot of fire we may want to work with a water creature like whale or otter.

Below is a partial list of fire and air animals and birds. There are many ways to connect to these beings and the best way is to watch them in their natural environment. If they have died naturally, we may want to ask for a feather, a bone or some of their fur to remind us of their power.

Fire

Lion, linked to the Sun. This powerful animal comes in many shapes and forms, from the domesticated house cat to the tigers of the Serengeti Plains. They all share skills of agility, gracefulness and ferocity if necessary. Mountain lions are strong and stealthy hunters and teach us to be quiet, elusive and noble.

Coyote, linked to Mercury and Uranus. Coyotes are known for their howling cry, and hunt by themselves or with one other. They have long been seen as a trickster totem by many traditions. Coyote teaches us to be wise by being the fool. They can test us as well as make us laugh and help open doors of realization in sudden brilliant flashes.

Snake, linked to Pluto. Snakes have a primal power and can induce tremendous fear due to their speed and sometimes venomous fangs. These reptiles can sense their environment through their tongue, eyes and the vibrations they feel in their bodies. They will shed their skin at least once a year. Snakes are powerful allies for healers and medicine people, as much of their work is transformational. One of the most famous symbols of healing is the caduceus, which depicts two snakes coiling around a staff. Snakes teach us to be powerful, intense and alert.

Bee, linked to the Sun and Neptune. Honeybees live in colonies of up to 60,000 workers, a queen and a few hundred male drones. They help pollinate plants and trees by gathering the nectar and pollen from flowers. Workers communicate where pollen is to be found by dancing.

This powerful little creature teaches us to gather sweetness in our lives, to nourish the community through service and to buzz with love and sexuality.

Air Beings

Eagle, linked to Jupiter. This majestic raptor often sits in perches high above streams and the ground. With powerful vision, eagles are able to sight their prey and fly with lightning speed toward their kill. Eagles teach mature and solid strength, clear vision and leadership skills.

Mountain goat, linked to Saturn. Though these beings also have an affinity to the earth element, their natural terrain is up high in the clouds and mists of windswept mountains.

Mountain goats have a steady and sure-footed gait, and can use their powerful strength to quickly bound over boulders and up crags. These beings help us to be direct and sure on our path, to be clear and grounded in our movements and in our relationships.

Swallow, linked to Mercury. Watch as they dance and swim in circles in the air, joyfully playing with each other as they dart by trees and brush. These birds teach us to be playful and to laugh, to be joyful in the moment.

Raven, linked to Pluto. This powerful bird is watchful and confident. With tremendous intelligence, they take in everything around them and strategize, make their decisions and then directly go after what they want and need. Ravens help us to act boldly and truthfully, to face what is dark or hidden in order to reveal the truth.

Water

Whale: Linked to Neptune. This majestic creature is found throughout the world's oceans. It is the largest mammal on the Earth and yet holds tremendous grace and beauty in its immense frame. Whales also communicate in a complex series of wails, snorts and whistles that are expressive and bewitching. This powerful being carries a vast reservoir of emotional intelligence. They are empathic, hypersensitive and tap us into the deepest layers of our hearts and souls.

Dolphin: Linked to Mercury and Neptune. These mammals have a great playfulness and joy in their manner. They enjoy chattering away to each other with a language of whistles and clicking sounds. They live in small groups and take care of and tend to each other when in danger. Dolphin is a great totem animal for friendship, communication, playfulness and expressiveness.

Otter: Linked to Neptune and Mercury. These sleek and solitary creatures have a tremendous ability to dive and swim quickly and gracefully along shores of rivers and lakes. They usually live alone and spend endless hours cleaning themselves. Otters do not settle in one place their entire lives, but instead will move around, searching for the best places to find a meal. Otter is a good ally for those who need quickness, agility, grace and fluidity in their lives. Otter also helps us to be more joyful, playful and in the moment.

Salmon: Linked to the Moon, Neptune. This powerful creature has long been a totem to the coastal Native American peoples and is a source of strength and power for many tribes. Salmon live in salt water for much of their lives, then will travel upstream through fresh water to hatch their eggs. The newborn then cycles and rhythms and remind us to flow with our environment. Salmon is highly nourishing on a physical, emotional and spiritual level, bringing us strength and serenity.

Earth

Bear: Linked to Mars and Neptune. These large animals roam in forests and mountains and one can often spot them near a streambed drinking water or waiting to catch a fish. Their slow and lumbering quality is deceptive, for if they need to, they can run at tremendous speeds and hurdle boulders and tree stumps easily. Bears are usually relaxed and will spend hours foraging for berries and good plant life. If threatened or cornered, they can become ferocious and will use their claws and teeth to quickly kill their opponent. Bears are a good ally for those needing strength, confidence and power. They also have a special relationship to dreaming as they spend much of the winter hibernating.

Buffalo: Linked to Saturn. Buffalo once roamed in immense herds across the plains of North America. Hunted almost to extinction, they are slowly growing in number again. These creatures spend much of the day feeding on grass to help nourish their large frames.

Buffalo travel with packs for long distances to find suitable feeding grounds. They have long been revered as a source of food, clothing, shelter and tools. Buffalo teach us endurance, strength and the power to remain firm and true under adverse conditions.

Badger: Linked to the Moon and Mars. Badgers make their home in burrows that they dig under the ground. They prefer to stay there in the daytime and come out in the dark to forage and feed. These animals are incredibly skillful at digging and will rapidly make a new hole to live in. They can become aggressive if threatened and will hunt other small animals with their sharp claws and teeth. Badgers are resilient, industrious and fierce when necessary. They are a good ally for protection and courage.

Elk: Linked to Saturn. These strong and sturdy creatures like to travel alone or in packs through forests and mountainous areas. They walk cautiously and precisely but can flee with bounding leaps when endangered. They have a very acute sense of smell and hearing and can pick up on activity from hundreds of yards away. Elk is a strong ally for those needing to feel more grounded and self-confident. Elk are proud and self-contained, sensitive and restrained in their manner.

Conclusion

Animals are a source of strength and power that we can call on in our daily life. Find an animal that best suits your elemental makeup in your astrological chart. To help call on these beings, find a feather, a bone, a tooth or even a picture of them and keep it in a sacred place like on an altar. Include the animal in your prayers and thoughts and take some time to observe them in their natural environment. Slowly, your relationship with the spirit of the animal will grow and in time you will gain some of the wisdom of that being.

The Order of Web Weavers Crystal Web Mapping Project

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalog your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly cataloged we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,

The Order of Web Weavers
