Runes and Heathenry

By Gothi Freyatrú

Waes Hael!

Unfortunately due to a technical error on my part the last section of last weeks article missed publication.

My salient point being: that it is somehow ironic that a tradition (wicca) which has as one of its central cores: the idea of harming none; comes from a tradition of blood sacrifices. The very word Rede has as its root the act of sanctifying or making holy by reddening something with the blood of a sacrifice.

So for all those who hark back to the days of Wicca being a religion of the Old Gods of the Saxons. Which of course 'can be proved' because the word: 'Wicca' is taken from the Anglo-Saxon for a wise person. I ask you also to think on this:

Is Raymond Buckland right with his Seax Wicca? Is basing Wicca more firmly in the past a good thing? After all it would seem that linguistically many of its most important parts come from that time and culture. So perhaps it might be worth also examining another question: can we say historically that the Saxons followed the Rede?

Well this is a hard one. There are plenty of contemporary sources from Bede and the AS chronicles which attempt to outlaw the worship of devils and the use of magic. From this we can tell that the old Heathen religion was alive and kicking well into the supposed Christian era. But this doesn't prove that the Saxon Heathens followed the Rede, just that they were still up to some practices that the early church didn't like.

I would put forward the theory that, had it survived, any kind of moral code regarding not hurting or harming anything is more likely to be a Christian influence. Had any of the old practices been written down and survived all these years then they would have been most likely to have been recorded by monks and been given a very different emphasis.

As it is there are no Anglo-Saxon records of anything like the Rede being in existence. Of course there is the argument that just because something hasn't been found yet does not mean it didn't exist once. However the complete lack of evidence from the ancient world would also lend strength to the argument that Wicca does not have its roots in the sixth century after all. It does lay weight to the argument however that Gerald Gardiner simply cherry picked ideas from a variety of different traditions and put them all together.

This seems a case of someone borrowing a word from another culture to lend legitimacy to something that was very new. However if you don't understand the language and culture of the people you are borrowing your ideas and terminology from; you are likely to be left with overtones in the words you used which have nothing to do with your original intention. Hence you have: 'Rede' which has it's roots in the act of making a blood sacrifice being used to give a name to the moral code of the new religion without all the darker connotations the original root word had.

A - Z of Religions – Rastafari

Rastafari is a young, Africa-centred religion which developed in Jamaica in the 1930s, following the coronation of Haile Selassie I as King of Ethiopia in 1930.

Rastafarians believe Haile Selassie is God and that he will return to Africa members of the black community who are living in exile as the result of colonisation and the slave trade.

Rastafari theology developed from the ideas of Marcus Garvey, a political activist who wanted to improve the status of fellow blacks.

There are approximately one million world wide adherents of Rastafari as a faith. The 2001 census found 5,000 Rastafarians living in England and Wales.

Followers of Rastafari are known by a variety of names: Rastafarians, Rastas, Sufferers, Locksmen, Dreads or Dreadlocks.

It spread globally following the success of Bob Marley and his music in the 1970s

Rastafarians believe that blacks are the chosen people of God, but that through colonisation and the slave trade their role has been suppressed. The movement's greatest concerns are the repatriation of blacks to their homeland, Africa, and the reinstatement of blacks' position in society

It is an exocentric religion - as Haile Selassie, whom adherents consider as God, is outside the religion

- Rastafari religious ceremonies consist of chanting, drumming and meditating in order to reach a state of heightened spirituality
- Rastafarian religious practice includes the ritual inhalation of marijuana, to increase their spiritual awareness
- Rastafarians follow strict dietary laws and abstain from alcohol.
- Rastafarians follow a number of Old Testament Laws
- There is a separate code of religious practice for women in Rastafari
- Rastafarians believe reincarnation follows death and that life is eternal
- Rastafarians are forbidden to cut their hair; instead, they grow it and twist it into dreadlocks
- Rastafarians eat clean and natural produce, such as fruit and vegetables
- Rastafarians try to refrain from the consumption of meat, especially pork
- Rastafarians are opposed to abortion and contraception

Rastafarian colours

The Rastafarian colours are red, green and gold. Sometimes black is added. These colours are chosen because:

- Red signifies the blood of those killed for the cause of the black community, throughout Jamaican history
- Green represents Jamaica's vegetation and hope for the eradication of suppression
- Gold symbolises the wealth of Ethiopia
- Black signifies the colour of the Africans who initiated Rastafari

The Rastafarian symbol

The lion is the symbol of Rastafari.

This lion represents Haile Selassie I, who is referred to as the 'Conquering Lion of Judah'. Rastafarians' dreadlocks represent the lion's mane.

What is Qabalah?

The Qabalah is a vital and dynamic system of spiritual growth which is used widely within the Western Mystery Tradition today from the Golden Dawn to the Servants of the Light, Wicca through to the Ordo Templi Orienti, Qabalistic thought, symbolism and ideas are incorporated in both rituals and philosophies.

The word Qabalah comes from the Hebrew "QBL" meaning "received teaching/tradition". Qabalah is a truly ancient system that can be traced back thousands of years with the first major Qabalistic book, the Sepher Yetzirah (Book of Formation) dating to around the time of the birth of Christ. The wellknown image of the Tree of Life, which embodies the Qabalistic system, was first recorded around the 15th century, although it may have existed prior to this. The Tree of Life glyph is a symbolic representation of man and his relationship with the universe and the divine. The ten Sephiroth (spheres) of the Tree of Life can be seen to be akin to bridges, connecting man and the finite universe with the infinite and ultimate deity.

It is important to keep in mind that although the Qabalah is originally Hebrew system, there are many different forms, schools of thought and ideas concerning the tradition today and it has, as already been stated become widely incorporated into much of Western magic. To distinguish the Western Mystery system from that of the original Judiac system the term "Qabalah" is used, with Kabbalah denoting the original Jewish system of mysticism. When spelt Cabala, it refers to the specifically Christian interpretation of the system. These distinctions may seem a bit silly at first, but they are necessary in order to coherently understand the system without the contradictions which may be inherent in trying to merge the different systems without sufficient knowledge. It is also used in order to show respect by making a distinction between the original Hebrew system and those practiced in other cultural and philosophical settings, as often the way in which it is taught may be quite contrary, or developed along a different philosophy from that originally intended.

According to tradition Adam learned Kabbalah from the archangel Raziel (archangel of Chokmah - Wisdom), in the Garden of Eden. Adam taught his descendants, like Hanoch and Methuselah, who taught Noah. Noah taught Abraham, who taught some of its mysteries to the Egyptians. Moses learned Kabalah first in Egypt, but learned much more from the angels in the wilderness, studying Kabbalah for 40 years. Moses taught the seventy elders, establishing the line of transmission of Kabbalah into the tribes. Abraham was said to have written the "Sepher Yetzirah" (Book of Formation), which is the first great Kabbalistic book, laying the foundations and symbolisms which much of this course is derived from.

The Qabalah is a very dynamic system that lays out a map of the human psyche and the universe, giving you the tools to pursue your spiritual path at your own pace. This means that you can pursue your spiritual development and relationship with the divine without the need for an intermediary priest telling you how things have to be. It is also very powerful as it enables you to explore and re-explore different aspects of yourself, integrating your energies to make you more efficient and better able to develop your own gifts and genius, and appreciate the qualities of others.

The different ways of looking at the Tree of Life all give you different keys to unlocking your own potential. You can work on developing the different aspects of yourself in harmony, rather than unbalancing yourself by focusing exclusively on one aspect of your psyche. This means that you have a safe way to develop. Qabalah will push you to always strive for the next level, making it a pleasure to become a better person, and helping you enjoy your life more as your horizons expand and your appreciation of the universe becomes more panoramic. You can find your limits and then transcend them!

Extremely Compatible

Qabalah has become part of what is called the Western Mystery Tradition, referring to the practice of magic in Europe through the last few centuries. This is partially because Qabalah is extremely compatible with other spiritual systems, and can help you to explore different religions and gain a greater appreciation of the inherent truths within them. For instance, you can be a Christian, a Wiccan or a Buddhist and still benefit from practising the Qabalah, as it provides a model that enables the comparison of different religions, different pantheons and different myths. Qabalah permeates both the Old Testament and modern pagan thought.

The Qabalah is relevant to our mundane lives as well as our spiritual ones. By working on improving our virtues and eradicating our vices, we become more positive and productive members of our communities. The ideas within Qabalah are multi-layered, and can be appreciated within many different contexts. Hence even scientific ideas can often be explored within a Qabalistic framework – a rare phenomenon for spiritual systems. Qabalah helps you make links between all the different areas of your life, appreciating it as part of a holistic journey, and yourself as part of a greater whole, the sum of life striving for perfection.

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

The Order of Web Weavers Crystal Web Mapping Project

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
