Veterinary Notes

Summer Hazards in Dogs & Cats Part two.

Grass Seeds

- The dry seeds of rye grasses can work their way into eyes, ears and feet and cause a lot of irritation and discomfort. This is mainly a canine problem
- Miniature schnauzers are less prone to acquiring grass seeds than for example spaniels with their floppy ears and furry feet but it is still good policy to check your dog's coat at the end of every walk.
- Furious head shaking and rubbing may indicate a grass seed in the ear and will necessitate an urgent trip to the vet.
- A lot of foot licking and the presence of a red lump or an open oozing hole can indicate a grass seed in a foot. These are often very hard to locate and remove particularly if they have been in a while as they continue to migrate through the body so, although not an emergency, prompt action is advisable.

Infectious diseases.

- There has recently been a lot of discussion in the newsletter about the wisdom of vaccination and I don't propose to reopen that debate here. However, I would strongly recommend that all dogs do receive an annual "lepto" booster.
- Leptospira are bacteria and unlike viral vaccines, bacterial vaccines only provide short term immunity so regular boosters are essential.
- Leptospira cause an infectious jaundice in animals and man (Weil's disease) and may be fatal. The bacteria are carried by rats and excreted in the rat urine.
- Dogs that love swimming or snuffling around alongside rivers and ponds are particularly at risk but anyone who watched the David Attenborough series "Life of Mammals" will remember that we are all only a few feet from a rat at any moment.

Heat Stroke

- Although commonly associated with dogs that have been left alone in cars on a hot day, heat stroke can affect any animal with young and elderly especially at risk.
- Try to keep your dog quiet in very hot weather (cats are more sensible and do this themselves!), move it into the coolest place and ensure it has plenty to drink.
- Signs of heat stroke are panting, vomiting, and dry mouth. The animal may appear limp or may collapse and in severe cases may have convulsions. It will usually feel hot to the touch and will have a raised body temperature (normal is 101F).
- This is a veterinary emergency as fluid therapy is usually required but as a first aid measure cool the animal by dousing it with lots of cold water.

Musing of Loki

Let's start at the... Beginning

Walking into my dojo for the first time was exciting, while at the same time mixed with all sorts of swirling emotions. At the age of 11 with two other neighborhood friends of mine, we were ready to become the next Bruce Lee or Jean-Claude Van Damme. In my style, there are 7 belts, the last one being black. Walking in as fresh new white belts, we were awed by all around us. There were other kids in the class that had higher ranks and worn-looking belts. These were the experienced students, and I felt like a nobody compared to them. Some were cocky, and others had more tact. We were all very quiet in that first class, but in the years to come I changed.

To explain a little about my styles, there were two. Kenpo – A hard hitting style of punches and kicks that can be used to inflict severe pain and injuries including broken bones and death. Chin-na – A manipulation style used to control your opponent with the bonus of no bruising and requiring leverage and not strength. Of course, this leverage can also be used to break bones if need be. Lesson one; after learning about the styles we were going to learn and descriptions of them both, we were told to line up. We lined up and learned our first lesson, which until my life ends is probably the most important I have ever learned. Balance. With balance, we can live. Can this be a loaded statement? To explain it in a martial arts standpoint, as a balanced fighter, you can react quicker against someone that is flat-footed. To even your weight between both feet with your knees slightly bent greatly increases your chance of staying on your own feet and not prone on the ground where your are severely crippled in your defense. Ah, another loaded word. Defense. The only reason to be in this dojo is to learn defense.

So, what do those words add up to? Balanced Defense. As time went on, we learned many other lessons, but as I tested for rank upon rank, guess which one was the most important? Learning to attain balance and to utilize it with every future lesson, even when it seemed improbable, was a task that stretched our minds. Possibly, a turning point in my life was then to begin to utilize balance for not only my martial arts, but for also my life. Meditation was introduced early on in class, but for a young child very difficult.

I began to teach at the age of 13, which for me was young, but I was seen in different eyes. To teach and/or to mentor should be a requirement for any serious student of any subject. This should include all ages, not just adults because they have a better understanding. I began teaching ages as young as 7, and up to 15. I was a tall youth and was bumped into the adult class 2 years early. At my rank I had something to offer, especially for the newer white belts. In my styles' heyday, there were many children interested in martial arts, just not for the right reason. I blame it on the Power Rangers, for many thought they would be dressed in a red suit, fighting the bad guys. I re-painted the overall picture for the many that chose to see this, and some quit.

Teaching children taught me patience. Has anyone ever heard of patience in a 13 year old teenage boy? Right... The patience that I learned was then used in my meditation practice. So, just like the wind from a butterfly's wings can cause a hurricane, teaching children has so enabled me to search out my spirituality with an ease I would not have had, had I not taught.

Sadly, in my beginning class of white belts, I am the only one out of 20+ that earned my black belt. None of them even got up to an intermediate rank, quitting way beforehand. Why did I stay? But, I saw a difference in me compared to them. Living a spiritual life. Most of the kids were there for the wrong reasons, including my neighbors. I was there for my health firstly. I was also there to breach a gap in a friendship that was declining. As time passed, I began to understand the teachings moreso than just kicks and punches. When did that happen? To think on that isn't an easy one, but probably during the intermediate ranks I began to feel more inner peace. It seemed to flip-flop here and there the higher in rank I'd go, for when I was taught something that was a life or death tactic, sometimes I would mull over it and my mental state would be uneasy. These are the times when additional training would have been helpful.

The mind and psyche of a youth in life or death situations needs to be trained and also to learn the consequences of their actions. If a martial arts student ends up maiming or causing the death of their opponent in self defense, there are many directions they can go; some positive, and some negative. In one positive way, as long as the student has tried several times to use non life-threatening force, followed the legal laws in place for such a situation, and has come to terms with the consequences of their ability, they will come out of this a stronger student, even with the death of another. I am not saying it is ok for anyone to maim or take life, but the situation has to be trained for. In a negative light, some people have discovered that taking the life of another is easy, and revel in this. With some of the techniques I trained in, this is a fact of how easy it can be. Some students are not taught these, and all of them are taught in secrecy by only the senior black belts. Again, we come to the basis of this lesson. Balance. Balance in a confrontation, and balance in life. I'd like to know others thoughts on this next question. IF you were put into a situation, either by a job duty or by walking down the street and being assaulted, and you were forced to defend yourself to a point of ending the life of another, would you be able to? I follow the Wiccan Rede and know its most basic rule like I know my name and Patron. My answer to this... It depends. I suppose the situation would have to be my life or theirs; but still there is nothing that could prepare us for the final result. In 20 years I have only used my abilities one time. I was assaulted at a job I held and had to defend both myself and my boss; I stood over him while taking nine full swings from a guy with a Louisville Slugger baseball bat. I blocked eight of the strikes with my forearms, but one did get through to my chest. During those 15-20 seconds while this happened, I saw the confidence in my assailant drain out of him because I did not retreat. I waited until my boss was out from underneath me and then withdrew. I was bruised for about three months, but that was the extent of my injuries. This guy wanted me... Out of the way? Unconscious? Could he have wanted me dead? I don't know, but feel I reacted the best way in this situation. I want to always teach my students the same compassion I have for life, all life.

Teaching never stops, wherever I go. I watched just recently as my one grandson ripped a vine from a tree in my yard. I asked him why he did that. He had no reason to give me but the shrugging of his shoulders. I then asked him if he'd like it if the tree ripped one of his arms. He didn't like that comment much, and I know some might groan because of the morbid statement made to an 8 year old, but when I explained to him about the life within the vine, the same life which he has in his own body, I saw a flicker of understanding. This is what I strive for in all of my teachings. Be they in martial arts, Wicca, or just life itself. Revere that which thrives on this plane of existence. There are other levels we will reach, in our own time. Within life is awareness. If we can be aware of our surroundings and not live our lives wearing horse-blinders, I feel that is a step in the right direction. Within life is balance; within balance is awareness. To live our lives in balance, we can take that next step to awareness.

My last question here would be – Have you made that step?

Blessings,

Rev. Lee Fluhr
aka. Loki Aesir

Enquire Within for Everything (Well Almost)

Rev. Moonleaf

MM Everyone,

Well here we are again on the edge of Autumn here in Australia. I say on the edge because though the official date has come and gone it is still very hot here... Victoria is still under fire threat and now Western Australia is too.

The humidity in here in the north made today's 35°C feel something like 40°C but I guess its better than being buried under piles of snow. ☺

The wheel is turning and the season is changing and before we know it Spring will have burst into bloom in the northern hemisphere and the last harvest feast of the year will be on us here in the south.

As I write I chat to a friend, her life has been incredibly difficult but she still manages to raise a smile for me when I am glum. She makes me smile and laugh and that is the specialness of her.

Though I know her trials make mine seem insignificant she never says so she just works to make me feel better.

Hopefully we can all do this for someone everyday, even if it is just a smile hello, an acknowledgement that you see them, they do matter.

My thoughts turn to another friend, a child with a disability who lives life to the fullest everyday. He has a very active and creative mind and sees more in people than they give him credit for being able to.

I remember seeing a segment of a current affairs show the other night where the reporter revisited his favourite couple in Australia.

They both suffer from Cerebral Palsy, they married when quite young and 15 years down the track are still married are very happy and have two wonderful children in their teens who are perfect in every way.

Their secret? To be thankful for everything they can do, no matter how small, to love with their whole hearts, and to never let what others think of them become any business of theirs.

Their children have had to defend them from ignorant people since the day they started school, but they could not be prouder of their parents if they were Gold Medal athletes at the Olympics... ☺

To them they are the Gold Medal winners, just by managing to get through each day with a smile and a feeling of love for their fellow man, their parents move mountains to work, live and love, to spend each day together happy and secure in the face of what someone else may have seen (and many did) as unsurmountable odds.

And then I think of my cousin, darling boy, in my memory banks, born with Downs Syndrome and died 4 years to the day later with Leukaemia and never a complaint from that little man... He walked (they said he wouldn't), he talked (they said he wouldn't), and He sang and laughed, oh how he laughed, you had to laugh with him and he went to sleep a happy smiling child. He definitely woke up an Angel...☺

My own dear boy had a favourite saying... "Don't Worry Mum, Just be Happy, it's just another day"...☺

And so when we look at all the doom and gloom around us just think of all the people who are worse off than you, the ones that meet each day with a smile that touches their eyes and your hearts... and... Don't Worry, Be Happy... Its just another day, a day for you to have the opportunity to do something nice for someone else.

Happy a very happy day!!!

Merry Part
Moonleaf

Your Incredible Shrinking Groceries

Jan 14, 2009 3:00 pm

By Veronica Peterson, Web Editor, Care2 Healthy and Green Living

While reaching for my usual breakfast cereal at the local bodega, I noticed something different. “Eco-friendly packaging!” the box proclaimed. “Fabulous!” I thought. Until I got home and plopped it down next to my older, almost-empty box. Hmm. “Eco-friendly” must be code for “much smaller,” because while the sizes were noticeably different, the red $3.69 price tag remained the same.

Portion reduction, called “short-sizing,” has become alarmingly common over the last year. The Chicago Tribune reports that since 2007, Wrigley’s gum has shrunk its 17-stick pack in favor of a new 15-stick “Slim Pack”; Nature Valley granola bars have gone from 70 bars a case to 60; and a can of Starkist tuna is down from 6 oz. to 5 oz. Tyson chicken, Country Crock spread, Frito-Lay’s Doritos and Hellmann’s mayonnaise are also slimming down—but prices are not.

When asked about the necessity of these redesigns, companies are quick to throw our “eco-wants” right back in our green faces. A Kellogg’s spokeswoman said reducing the amount of cereal per box was “to offset rising commodity costs for ingredients and energy used to manufacture and distribute these products” and in doing so is “taking into account the new eco-climate.”

But Ben Popken, of The Consumerist, when interviewed on NPR, said he believes that the companies are doing nothing for the greater good and instead, lining their own pockets. “The economy is getting tighter, and I think everyone recognizes that. The problem is that they’re trying to, you know, sneak it across the table without people noticing. So when that works on the large swath of myopic consumers, that’s great and that works out for them. But when you have people who are actually paying attention to these things, then it’s going to be a problem for both the consumer and the manufacturer because then people feel like they’re being tricked.”

“It’s about getting on Facebook, or a blog or on the company’s blog,” says Mintel new-product expert, Lynn Dornblaser, in a recent New York Times article. “Consumers are standing up, and the ones who don’t like it are being very vocal.” Consumer watch dogs like Incredible Shrinking Groceries and The Consumerist are keeping the public aware and providing a forum for some good old fashioned grumbling. “It’s a surprise when you go to buy something and it’s considerably smaller and they don’t tell you why.”

The upside? Maybe you shouldn’t feel so guilty for eating that entire bag of chips—it could have 20 percent less calories than last year.

Poets Retreat

The Gift of Life

She was 40 years old,
This woman who had a fall,
And though she didn't survive,
She helped others live.

All she did was say yes,
A word that has only 3 letters,
But it made all the difference,
To me and a few others out there.

I got her kidney,
And so did someone else,
Heart and lungs,
Liver and bowel and probably some other organs too.

I went for dialysis 3 times a week,
Food restrictions and fluid limits I had to adhere to,
Always tired – I rarely had energy,
As for traveling and studying – I couldn't cope with it.

Now coz of her my life has changed,
I'm not on a leash anymore,
I can travel when I want to,
And study and follow my dream.

I can't help wondering,
Was she married or did she have a partner,
Did she leave any kids behind,
And do her friends miss her too?

All she did was say yes,
A 3 letter word,
Yet THANK YOU seems far too small a word,
For what she did for me.

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

For more in-depth information, including the cost of the lessons, contact me at

krystelneuman@yahoo.com

May You Blessed Be

Krystel

THE ORDER OF WEB WEAVERS CRYSTAL WEB MAPPING PROJECT

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers
