Building Community through Corporate Regalia

Rev. Terry Power, HP

Order of Artificers
Silthoron9@yahoo.com

We spend a great deal of time in shrine and temple development classes discussing community building as a means creating the bonds that hold a group of people together. We look at outreach and activation. We spend a lot of energy discussing group identity and how to share and spread the word.

What we often miss is the power of symbols in achieving these goals.

Early in the shrine development process, we are encouraged to create a unique sigil for the group. But what do we do with it? How can this be used to build community? The simple answer is that we need to display it. And this is where corporate regalia comes into this discussion.

Corporate regalia can include many things – robes, banners, tools, decorations, etc. But for this discussion, I will limit my comments to banners and the ritual tools we use every time the group gets together to cast a circle.

I admit it. I love the show that accompanies good ritual. I believe the tools and decorations we use in ritual, particularly group ritual, have a huge impact on the overall experience of those that attend. I also believe that people in groups begin to invest their personal energies into the tools they see time and again in the groups' rituals. These tools begin to resonate with the group's energy... This is a great thing...

... until someone gets a job transfer or whatever and leaves the group and takes their loaned tool with them. To the best of my knowledge, most groups depend, almost exclusively, on the use of personal tools belonging to group members.

We live in a very mobile society and people move to new areas regularly. Naturally, they want to take their personal tools with them. I can fully appreciate this. But it does leave the group to find a new tool to borrow and begin the process of building group energy in a new tool all over again.

On the other hand, permanent regalia for the group would eliminate this potential problem. It will also create a sense of continuity for all members of the group, knowing this tool has been handed down through the various leaders and members of the group for however long. It creates a history and creates community.

I strongly encourage every in-person group – be it a shrine, a temple, even the Tradition itself – to begin the process. Obtain, create, acquire, etc. permanent regalia for your groups. And put your group sigil on everything. A chalice with the sigil on it can become a powerful symbol of sharing the group's identity. A scabbard for the group's athame can be decorated with the sigil.

The ideas are endless and varied. Each group will have different talents and ideas. This is another area where we can activate members by getting them involved in the creation of this regalia. We don't need to wait for ritual to begin putting group energy into these tools. That will begin at the very beginning in the creation phase.

Can you see the community building taking place? What a great way to share the group's identity. The power of symbols cannot be overstated here.

Some of you may be reading this and thinking, “But I’m not one of the crafty ones. I’m not good with my hands.” Luckily there are a couple of resources available.

The first place to look, of course, is within the group itself. The beauty of the group dynamic involves pooled talents. A particularly crafty person in the group may be asked to lead the effort and have workshops for the group’s members. More community building!

The second resource exists at the Tradition level. The Correllian Tradition has the Order of Artificers to handle regalia. Artificers are the kind of people who do their best to make everything they use. They can provide a great deal of guidance and assistance. Please, do not hesitate to contact them.

If you have questions or comments to share, feel free to contact me at silthoron9@yahoo.com. I will do my best to answer your question or to connect you with any assistance you need.

Now, let’s take a moment to consider what we have been discussing. Imagine for minute with me... You enter the ritual area and see the group sigil displayed proudly on a banner shifting slightly as the air moves. The Shrine Keeper or Temple Head enters the area tapping lightly with a staff as they walk. You note the sigil there as well. The circle is cast and the work is done. A chalice of juice or wine is passed from person to person. Again, you see the group sigil displayed. Again you are reminded of the community you belong to and the group identity. You are reminded at every turn that you belong to something larger than yourself – your Shrine – your Temple – your Tradition...

Can you see how the magic begins to build from the very moment you enter? This is community building. This is the power of corporate regalia.

Celtic Otherworld

Since the legend of King Arthur and the Grail had also borrowed and used Celtic motifs and symbolism, they had also used the symbolism of the sacred marriage. In the Welsh myths, Guinevere was known as Gwenhwyfar, a queen and goddess of Britain. So Gwenhwyfar was a personification of Britain; she was Britain (Guinevere), no one could prevent Mordred becoming the king of Britain. Like the later legend, Mordred's usurpation was short-lived. In whichever versions you may have read Arthur's kingship was in crisis. By marrying his aunt, the Queen, Mordred had a legitimate claim to the throne and crown. Whoever marry the Queen, has the key to the kingdom, because the Queen was the kingdom.

In the legend of the Grail, the Grail King, sometimes also known as the Fisher King or the Maimed King, was more closely associated with the fertility of the land than Arthur. Because the Grail King was maimed, his kingdom became a desolated and barren Waste Land. (There are several version of his maiming, so I won't go over this, but if you are interested, then read the Fisher King.) Since the Grail King was wounded in the thighs and became sterile, so his land became barren.

To restore the kingdom and the fertility of the land, the Grail King must be healed. Again, there are many versions of how the king was healed, but the most common version was that Grail hero, had to ask the correct question about the mystery of Grail: "Whom does the Grail serve?"

The whole point of this is that land was linked to the king's health, as if he was actually wedded to the land. Cause damage or injury to the king, then the land will suffer too. As can be seen, the Grail King and his land shared a common theme of the Celtic myths. The wholeness of the kingdom depended upon the king being completely healthy. This bring us back to the Irish myths, where a king who suffered from physical imperfection or disfigurement, he was barred from kingship. Nuada lost his arm in the war against the Fomorians. With only one arm he had to abdicate to Bres. Bres was physical beautiful and healthy, but he was unfit to rule as well, because he was a tyrant and the most ungenerous of king, which made him unpopular with his people. Such was Bres' tyranny that Nuada was first given a silver arm, so that Nuada can rule again. Later, Miach, the son of Dian Cécht, restored Nuada's arm, so that there was no uncertainty of Nuada's right to rule Ireland. Another famous king that was disqualified from ruling Ireland was Cormac Mac Airt was disfigured. Cormac, the high king of Ireland, lost one eye, so he had to abdicate to his son Cairbre Lifechair. the sovereignty of Britain. When Arthur married Gwenhwyfar (Guinevere), he was wedded to the land (Britain).

However, in the mainstream Arthurian literature, Guinevere not only representing the kingdom of Logres (Britain), but the source of Arthur's earthly power came from the Round Table.

There were several versions on the origin of the Round Table, but original table (told by Wace, in the Roman de Brut, c. 1155) was constructed so that all knights were equal, with no one having precedence over the others, regardless background (see the Life of King Arthur and Origin of the Round Table). The Round Table had nothing to do with Merlin and the Grail. But as the stories of the Grail became entwined with Arthur's knight, the origin of the Round Table was changed.

As early as 1200, a poet named Robert de Boron wrote a trilogy concerning the Grail: Joseph d'Arimathie, Merlin and Perceval. According to Boron, the Round Table was constructed by Merlin, using the Grail Table of Joseph of Arimathea as a model. Also Merlin made the table round because the circle was like the Earth. To shorten this story Merlin had originally built this for Uther Pendragon (Arthur's father), but at his death, King Leodegan of Camelide, the father of Guinevere, received the Round Table from Uther. When Arthur married Guinevere, Leodegan had bestowed the Round Table (and 100 knights) to Arthur as a dowry. (More detail about can be found in the legend of Excalibur, the Origin of the Round Table, and Merlin and the Grail.

The whole point of this story is that Guinevere was very much the symbol of the wholeness of the Round Table and the kingdom of Logres, in some way, she represented the power of kingship more so than Arthur himself. The Queen was one with the kingdom and the fellowship of the Round Table. The health of the kingdom and the fellowship of the Round Table depended upon Guinevere, since she owned the Round Table.

In the Mort Artu (Death of King Arthur, part of the romance in Vulgate Cycle), the Round Table had split because Guinevere was caught in her bedchamber with her lover Lancelot. She was to sentence to death, but Lancelot rescued her. War resulted with Arthur and his kinsmen against Lancelot and his kinsmen, and the division between two factions was symbolised the division of the Round Table. The division and war had seriously weakened Arthur's own power. However, the Round Table had further fractured when Mordred, his illegitimate son, acting as viceroy in Arthur's absence, had seized kingship and the kingdom. In this version, Mordred tried to force Guinevere into marrying him, but the queen had managed to escape.

In some early versions, it was Mordred, not Lancelot, who was Guinevere's lover. Mordred in the early legend was Arthur's nephew and the brother of Gawain. The king was absent in the war against Rome, when Guinevere had willingly seduced her husband's nephew. Through marriage to the Sovereignty of

Contracting with life, for your life

Pieter Heydenrych

One of the things that most everyone suffer from, or at least will suffer from at some point in the course of a normal lifetime, is a dissatisfaction with the hand that you were dealt. Yeah... that's what happened....

You were dealt THE hand..... right?

As it turns out, unfortunately for most the dissatisfaction will remain, and just like everything else, they will adapt, and get used to the presence of that forever remaining, dull pain that plagues you and compounds until you want to just scream out in frustration....

Fortunately in this case we are not all doomed that this fate. It is in fact the hand that you were dealt that is the issue here, in that you were not really dealt this hand, but in fact chose it on a subconscious or some other level. This to ensure that you have a little fun in your life...

(ehrr.. sorry, I meant to say, learn what you need to learn, and do what you need to do that is fun isn't it?)

In each instance, at some point or another during your life, or if you like your preceding life times, you have contracted. Contracted to live the life you are currently living. Contracted to be the person you currently are, and contracted to be in the place that you currently find yourself.

Now without going into too much detail, for most of us, this is something that happens automatically, subconsciously and even karmically. And because of this we tend to feel that we have had little say, or control in the matter. This especially since your being alive in itself (meant in the broadest possible sense) has in fact caused the contract to come into existence. And the terms of that contract was written, generally without getting any conscious input, or a requirement for consent from you. And in fact, odds are you did not even know it existed. And especially so since generally most of this contract was written during a time that you are not likely able to even remember. So pretty much just out there somewhere.....

Not that important. What is important though is the knowledge of it's existence.

If you can realize that you have a contract, you have taken the first step. Well either way, it's there, whether you realize it or not. Then... If you can realize that you do have the ability to renegotiate the terms of that contract, you have taken the next step.

And last but not the least.

If you realize that you have the ability to implement the terms of that contract, to suit you, and again change these terms if they do not. Then, and only then can you start to develop the tools you need to take control of your life.

And to get started with all this, all you need is the desire, and then a true will to take control of your life. Take possession of that which is yours already, (if you like). And with a little guidance, anyone can achieve anything. Yes... This means even you.
So?..... Realized it yet?...

Decided to own it yet (your life I mean)?...

Remember this...

Whatever you do. Every thought, every action, even every non-action that you take, is part of that which determines and writes the clauses of your agreement. It all determines where you are going, and what your end result will be.

The question then remains. What does your contract say?.....

Hell in a Nutshell

Greg Gourdian

Do you believe in Hell?

One wonder of creation is that whatever our beliefs may be, our beliefs have power and can influence what we will experience in life or in death. So if you believe in Hell you may be heading there, particularly if you harbor pain or sorrow in your heart.

I can tell you this because I have returned from Hell myself. It turned out to be very different from what I at first believed.

At first it was a lot like the descriptions from Dante's Inferno and various bibles and other sources such as TV, movies or novels. But these similarities existed because my mind had incorporated them into my old concepts of the afterlife.

The first details of Hell which I experienced turned out to be illusions of my mind and these slowly fell away from me over time as I revisited Hell more frequently and became more familiar with what was going on there. There were guides through Hell who appeared as I needed them, but these guides turned out not to be the fiends they at first appeared to be.

The guides through Hell were more angelical than demonic in nature but it took me time to realize that their intent was helpful rather than malign.

The guides returned me to my path over and over again by both direct and indirect means until I reached the center of Hell. There I discovered that the center of Hell is not in the center of the Earth as stories and myths have told; instead, I found the center of Hell in the center of my heart. You will find Hell in your own heart too if you are burdened by pain and regret.

These might seem like alarming words, but bear with me, for one of the mysteries revealed to me is that Hell is not at all a bad place. The literal meaning of Hell is, after all, Light.

The alleged ruler of Hell, Lucifer, is also known as the Angel of Light. He is alternately known as the Prince of Darkness because he has the power of Light over Darkness and can thereby master the darkness in our hearts and banish it. Likewise the Angel of light is known as the Master of Lies because that Angel knows the truth in our hearts and reveals it to us, thereby empowering us to overcome our self-deceits and the lies of others which we have mistakenly chosen to believe.

Anyway, I arrived at the center of Hell after many delays and wanderings and found myself confronted by the Devil Himself. Well he looked pretty ugly and terrifying and wicked and I was of course feeling some trepidation as I approached the Being before me. But I sensed compassion and warmth of character radiating from this frightful creature and I continued to approach. As I approached I could feel my heart opening up and changing, becoming lighter.

The countenance of the One before me changed as I approached becoming less demonic in appearance and more angelical with every step I took until I was running to embrace this one who stood in the very center of my heart.

It was my own self whom I embraced. The one who had appeared before me was but the final guide along the way.

In that wonderful embrace many illusions fell away from my mind and I felt the eternal presence of Spirit and I was transported to Heaven. I was no longer my Earthly incarnate identity, but instead had awakened to my eternal self, that which I truly am. It was a most joyous occasion; an occasion for which I was literally dying to experience.

I made this journey through Hell many times through many mortal experiences of death and my eternal other-life. (The after-life is an entirely inadequate term, there is only life after life; death is but another illusion.)

As my experiences with dying and my other-life were repeated, my memories of these experiences became strong enough to blossom in my conscious mind which is how I can now relate these experiences to you.

As I became more familiar with death and my other-life I learned we have three choices when we die. We may be resurrected or returned to the life we have just departed to carry on as if we had not just died, or we may be reincarnated to a different life in a strange or familiar world, or we may abide awhile in the other-life sharing with our family of friends there, renewing our spirits before choosing to return to an incarnate form for further lessons and adventures.

But I also learned that before we may avail ourselves of any of these options we have one duty to ourselves. We must become clear. We must acknowledge all the hurtful things in our heart, those things which we did or said which brought pain or suffering to others or to ourselves. We have only ourselves to answer to in the ultimate moment of death; we need only be truthful with ourselves to pass through this moment and move on.

Unfortunately I have often had some difficulty in facing myself and acknowledging truth within myself. It was the resistance to know myself in my own heart which made the journey to the light so tortuous and painful.

It is understood by Spirit that some spirits will run from the light rather than face it, which is why our guides through Hell may trick us into running to the light when we might otherwise resist. The guides through Hell are psychological projections of parts of ourselves who know the truth in our hearts and who know what we are running away from. So our guides sometimes use misdirection and deceit to get us to confront the pain and sorrow in our hearts so that we may release ourselves from bondage to them.

Eventually we may find our ways through Hell, even if it takes an eternity. Eternity is, after all, only a single moment in the other-life. So as long as it takes is as long as we need it to be, neither more nor less, and once that dreaded moment has passed we become free to be the pure beings of light we were always meant to be.

Hell la lu Jah! ...(translates as "Light From You God")

Now go to Hell! ...(but wait for me).

Weaving the Pagan Web

by Leigh

The first thing to do when designing a site is to decide on your audience. Are you going to have a site somewhat like this one -- mostly informational text? Or are you creating a showcase for your artwork? Is it a site dedicated to music? Once you have determined what you are going to make available on your site, you have to figure out what format is best to present your work to your audience.

Many Pagans are still not on the most up to date equipment. Many may be in college where Unix and Macs still out-number PCs. You may have someone browsing your site in a text-based web browser like Lynx at the same time as someone with the very latest web browser. Though both people are looking at the same site, each will see it very differently.

Look at your web site using your own Internet Explorer or Netscape browser, and everything may look fine -- your beautiful graphics are in just the right places, the color combinations are perfect. However, if you look through the eyes of your Lynx browsers, it's a different story.

If you use your graphics to create your entire navigational structure, and fail to place ALT tags on them, the text based browser won't be able to see where they are going. They may not even know there is a navigation structure there. Make sure you include text-based navigation, so they can explore your site, too. Test your site in multiple browsers, not just the one you prefer to use.

Something that webmasters in the US tend to forget is that outside the States, most people still pay by the minute for their Internet access. So when you use images on your site, make sure they are as small in size as possible, so your browsers don't have to wait all day to download one huge gif you are using as the splash screen to access your site. They will leave, or click through before the graphic loads. If the rest of your site contains graphics of the same size, your browsers may give up and leave.

While graphics are pretty, unless you are an artist showcasing your own work, people are not going to visit your entire site or return in the future unless you have some other content. It is important to have some substance amid the flash. Some write their own. Others enlist friends and kind strangers to write for them; some use content that has been originally printed elsewhere (hopefully with permission from the writer). Which brings up the sticky subject of copyright and ethics.

Using material that was created by others without their permission is unethical, illegal, and just plain wrong. This includes both text and graphics. Many people seem to think that just because something is on the Web it is free for the taking. This is not so.

Consider your web site another facet of your home. It is a representation of you on the Web. Would you go to the home of an artist, take one of their paintings without their knowledge, and hang it on your wall? That's the same thing as stealing graphics and text. I've been to sites that had nothing but unacknowledged graphics and text taken right from popular Pagan books. I leave sites like that immediately.

Think of your web site as an ongoing research paper. Your teachers in college and high school would not have tolerated plagiarism, and it shouldn't be tolerated on the web.

As for design ideas and methods, the best thing you can do for yourself is join a mailing list on HTML and Web Design, buy a book on design, or do a search for sites that give tutorials. Here are a few guidelines that I go by:

- * Avoid use of multiple animated graphics -- one or possibly two well done animated graphics can be charming, but several on a page can be distracting.
- * Avoid loading a page with many graphics, unless you have made sure they are very small in size, and they don't detract from what you have to say on the page.
- * Remember that screens come in all sizes -- if you make your content difficult to view at sizes other than what your computer is using, then you've just lost a large part of your audience. I've seen figures that say that 20% of computer users on the Internet still browse at 640 by 480.

Okay, I'll step down off my soapbox for a bit and let you get to work. Remember above all to have fun with your site. If you don't enjoy your site, it will show -- you'll update it less and less. And if you don't like your site, no one else will. So get out there and weave the Web!

A Tale of Project Sanctuary

I was contemplating a quiet evening when the alert came through of a soul desperately in need of help. I headed rapidly in the direction of the call, emerging in the borderlands between the energy realms and the physical world. From my vantage point I was looking down on a casualty department in a hospital where a middle aged couple were holding each other close and sobbing. I moved so I could see into the treatment room itself, and saw a teenaged girl lying on the bed while the nurses and doctors were treating her for an overdose, a suicide attempt. It was here that I found the girl herself, hovering above her body and looking distressed and lost.

I moved towards her and took her in my arms. I gently asked her why and between sobs she told me that she was desperately unhappy, that her parents didn't love her and that she couldn't please them. Judging by the reaction of the parents, I suspected that this was a teenage perception and depression, so I decided to take her on a magic trip.

Taking her hand I asked her what books and films she enjoyed. "Ones about dragons" she said eagerly "and unicorns, and fairies, and wizards". So I called on my dear dragon friend Goliath, and asked him to carry us on a journey through the energy realms. The girl, Sarah, clambered onto his back with glee, all the trauma forgotten for a moment.

Goliath took us on a wonderful tour of a mythical land, swooping low over rivers and plains, over unicorns, griffons, faeries and magical beings. Sarah was entranced and all the tension slipped from her.

Communicating with Goliath through mental pictures, I asked him to take us back to the past, to view Sarah's childhood. We flew into a crystal cave where the walls glistened with rainbow colours. This cave was the passage to the past and from it we passed through a gap in the fabric of time. We emerged above a suburban house where a young couple were bursting with joy and love as they cradled their new baby. They were Sarah's parents cuddling her baby self. I didn't say a word, just let her take in the scene. We moved forward in time to see the toddler Sarah, playing on a beach with her parents, being carried into the water and dipped into the waves. She was laughing, happy and clearly loved.

We moved on again, to see a six year old Sarah, running happily to school to join the other children in the playground while her mother waved her goodbye. She paused in her run to wave back and blow her mother a kiss. As we travelled forward in time we saw an eleven year old Sarah heading off to senior school. Looking nervous and unsure of herself and clinging to her mother's hand until she was in sight of the other children.

The picture changed again to show a slightly older Sarah on holiday with her parents, on a foreign shore with beautiful clear white sand. All were laughing and talking together, and Sarah paused to hug them both.

Finally, we reached the present and stopped over the casualty waiting area where Sarah's parents still wept. Sarah started weeping herself when she saw them. "Do you really want to leave them?" I asked. She shook her head and then looked longingly back at the mythical world. "You can still come here" I told her. "Just close your eyes and let your mind roam free and you will be here".

At that moment a smaller dragon appeared beside Goliath. “This is Heronus” I said. “He has come to be your very special friend in these realms. He will come and help you whenever you ask him but you must remember that he is doing this as a gift to you”. Sarah moved towards Heronus, put her arms round his neck and pressed her face against him as she wept. I could see Heronus sending out waves of golden healing energy which surrounded Sarah in a protective cocoon. “I’ll be back soon” she whispered to him.

I placed my arm around her shoulders and led her back to the treatment room where the hospital staff were still busy. “Time to go back” I said. She paused to kiss me and say thank you and then slipped back, merging with her body.

The atmosphere in the treatment room changed as Sarah’s vital signs suddenly improved and the sense of panic and urgency ceased. Sighs of relief could be heard and one doctor went out to fetch Sarah’s parents. They rushed into the room, and took hold of Sarah’s hands. Sarah opened her eyes, murmured “I love you” and then drifted back to sleep. As some of the strain drained from her parents, I sent a wave of healing energy towards them all, watching the golden light soak into them all, bringing them peace.

I moved back and thanked both Goliath and Heronus for their help this night, and then I made my way back to my own home relieved that a young girl’s life had been saved.

Combating Christian Paganism

While Christian paganism may seem to be a contradiction in terms, it sadly is not. Indeed, there are growing segments of the church which may be better described as pagan than as Christian. Many churches have abandoned biblical truth, and have instead simply latched onto the latest secular trends and fads.

Because belief in truth has been undermined in the surrounding culture, it is not surprising that truth is under attack within the churches as well. Unfortunately almost any non-biblical belief or agenda can now be found in various circles calling themselves Christian.

Want to introduce homosexuality into the churches? No problem. There are plenty of churches which have long ago given up on the biblical position on that issue. Want divorce to be just as easy as it is in the surrounding secular culture? Easy, that is well under way as well.

Want to try to combine New Age teaching with biblical beliefs? Yep, that too is being done in many churches. Want to argue that all religious traditions are more or less equal, and we must not be too exclusive in our beliefs? All sorts of church groups are running with that one. Sadly, much of the church today has simply succumbed to the spirit of the age

Consider the words of one leading pastor: “There is an amazing ignorance of Scripture among many, and a consequent want of established, solid religion. In no other way can I account for the ease with which people are, like children, ‘tossed to and fro, and carried about by every wind of doctrine’ (Eph. 4:14). There is an Athenian love of novelty abroad, and a morbid distaste for anything old and regular, and in the beaten path of our forefathers. Thousands will crowd to hear a new voice and a new doctrine without considering for a moment whether what they hear is true. There is an incessant craving after any teaching which is sensational, and exciting, and rousing to the feelings. There is an unhealthy appetite for a sort of spasmodic and hysterical Christianity.”

Powerful words. But they were actually written by the great English evangelical J. C. Ryle back in 1877! So this paganisation of the churches is not exactly new, but it seems to be getting more pronounced with each passing year. And I am not the only one to be greatly concerned about such trends. One of the fathers of modern evangelicalism, J.I. Packer is equally concerned, and has just penned a new volume in order to turn things around.

Called Grounded in the Gospel (Baker, 2010), Packer and Gary Parrett seek to stop the rot by calling Christians to return to sound biblical instruction, including the systematic teaching of Christian doctrine. A recent article in Christianity Today explains their concerns:

“Influential theologian J I Packer wants evangelical churches to recover catechesis, or systematic instruction in the essentials of the Christian faith. Packer believes the idea is an alien concept to most evangelicals. ‘We are drifting back into paganism, that’s the truth,’ he said in a lecture last Saturday at St Matthew’s Cathedral in Dallas, according to The Living Church News Service.

“The 83-year-old Anglican priest has co-authored a new book, Grounded in the Gospel: Building Believers the Old-Fashioned Way, in which he makes the case that catechesis is a non-negotiable practice of churches and is of no less value than Bible study and expository preaching.

“During Saturday’s lecture, he said he yearns for ‘Bible-based, Christ-centred, declarative in style’. But recovering catechesis in churches will be a challenge, he added. Earlier, he called it the greatest challenge for the 21st century church.”

Packer said its “ridiculous to think that no more learning of the faith is necessary after confirmation has taken place. Ongoing learning is part of the calling of the church. It has to be taught in all churches at all times.”

To which I offer a hearty ‘Amen’. I have been continually dismayed and astonished over recent years at just what a dismal understanding so many Christians have of even the most basic of Christian teachings. Many believers could not explain key biblical doctrines, or probably even recite five of the Ten Commandments.

Indeed, how many believers even read their Bibles on a regular basis, let alone study it thoroughly and consistently? And how many are getting sound teaching and biblical exposition in their own pulpits? I suspect that only a small minority of believers today are exposed to regular, systematic biblical teaching.

What many believers are getting today of course is plenty of entertainment. They are getting all sorts of mushy, feel-good pep talks, therapy sessions, how-to-courses (how to feel good about yourself, how to lose weight for Jesus, etc), and lots of bubblegum teaching.

But where is the solid book-by-book, chapter-by-chapter exposition of the Word of God? Where is the systematic teaching of basic Bible doctrines? Where is the emphasis on Bible memorisation and the daily study of Christian truths?

In a society which emphasises image over content, entertainment over teaching, superficiality over substance, and emotions over thought, it is no wonder that the churches have been floundering. They have simply bought into the surrounding culture.

They have thought that a parade of celebrities will do the trick. They have thought that making people feel good is all that is needed. They have thought that telling people what they want to hear instead of what they need to hear will suffice.

No wonder our churches are having so little impact, and so many in the world simply yawn – or laugh – at Christianity. No wonder we are making so little headway, and having so little influence. Why would the world want to come into the churches when all they find there is much of the same? If entertainment and amusement is all we can offer, well, the world can usually do a better job of such things.

Will a renewal of catechesis solve all of our problems? No, but it is surely part of a much-needed makeover of the church today. The importance of doctrine and teaching is splashed all over the pages of the New Testament. If the early disciples needed such systematic training and teaching in biblical truth, then we today certainly do as well.

I for one applaud the call of Packer to revitalise a dying, and increasingly pagan, church. The question is, will his call fall on deaf ears? Time will tell, but unless the Western churches decide to start getting serious about their faith – including the importance of biblical doctrine – then the future is looking rather grim indeed.

What Animals Teach Us about Spiritual Freedom

by Liz Mitten Ryan

Excerpted from her book Life Unbridled: What Animals Teach Us about Spiritual Freedom

The animals who communicate these messages are dogs, cats and horses. Individuals who have unique and special attributes that are specifically theirs, but unlike humans they continually commune with others of their species and interconnect with all life on this planet and beyond.

Unbridled is about life; everlasting life lived in complete spiritual freedom. Confines are constructs of fear, - fear manifest on the physical plane. There is nothing to fear but fear itself, for fear limits freedom and we are free except by our own choice. There is nothing one can do about death. It comes at its own choosing but only by our agreement. We have all experienced deaths and births before, and we are here now by our choosing. What is there to fear but life lived less than fully?

We (the animals) have much to teach about spiritual freedom. We have not lost connection to the All (God) and the understanding of All there is. On one level you remember that connection and the truth of our existence. We are all there is, the be All and the end All. Life is All one experience. The experience of us All. It is only when we limit our perspective to a finite point in that existence that we have anything to fear. That finite point is the ego; the individual physical plane existence experienced for but a brief moment in time. If we choose to identify with that fragile experience then there is much reason to fear.

Animals have not chosen to limit themselves as people do. Often our lives are given no importance by humans. We, being no lesser parts of the All, experience the same range and depth of emotion that it is, possible to experience. We love, desire, feel happiness, sadness, pain and longing, - often more so as we are often captives in a barren existence, prisoners of human ambition. Had we wanted, there has been little incentive or opportunity to develop a finite sense of self, and possibly that is why we are in our present situation. When one does not solely identify with this existence it is easier to leave it.

Imagine as we do, living with the perspective of being inside and outside yourself at the same time. We can experience all aspects of life on this plane and beyond, the greater All existence. The moment you make that connection everything is given. It is like a drop of water becoming the ocean and the moment it touches, it is the ocean, a beam of light blending with all light. Within and without there is nothing but to become All form itself, Oneness, - All.

The moment we touch the All we become the All. It is a joy and a home coming that is immeasurable. This is what we have to teach you about spiritual freedom. Do not imagine yourself a drop of water or a beam of light when you are the ocean and the sky - do not imagine yourself to be the world, when you are the universe. You have nothing to fear but fear itself. Fear is a finite piece of freedom and freedom is All there is. As the raindrop falls into the sea and evaporates again to become a cloud, so is your life. Let us help you gain a new perspective.

A pebble came from the earth.
A rock came from the pebble.
The boulder came from the rock.
The mountain came from the boulder.
But now back to earth.

The wind came from the sky.
The breeze came from the wind.
The gust came from the breeze.
The tornado came from the gust.
But now back to the sky.

The snow came from the cold.
The water came from the snow.
The river came from the water.
The ocean came from the river.
But now back to the cold.

The fire came from the light.
The flare came from the spark.
The blaze came from the flare.
The inferno came from the blaze.
But now back to the light.

Life came from the ashes.
We came from life.
Unity came from us.
Destruction came from unity.
But now back to the ashes.

The earth,
The wind,
The water,
The fire,
The life,
Return all as one, from beginning to end.

Correllian Awards

Merry Meet Everyone,

It is time to open the nominations for the Correllian Service Awards. We are pleased to announce that we are now accepting nominations for the Year 10 April Lustration. These awards were instituted to recognize the excellent work of the members of our Tradition.

The nominations will close out at Midnight on 31 March, Year 10. This allows the committee and the First Priesthood sufficient time to prepare for the awards during the Lustration ritual in April.

There are five awards in this program:

Order of the Copper Athame -- representing Air, the realm of ideas, recognizes achievement in the Sciences, including divination, astrology, herbology, enviro-technology, etc.

Order of the Golden Wand -- representing Fire, the realm of passion and action, recognizes acts of bravery or compassion in the service of others.

Order of the Silver Chalice -- representing Water, the realm of emotion and intuition, recognizes achievement in the Arts, including visual arts, dance, music, etc.

Order of the Iron Pentacle -- representing Earth, the realm of stability, integration, and wisdom, recognizes achievement in teaching, writing, etc.

Order of the Thurible -- representing Spirit, the smoke carrying our prayers to the Gods, recognizes achievement in ritual leadership and writing. This award can also be used to recognize those whose spirituality had inspired others to greater commitment and devotion.

The awards are open to every member of the Correllian Tradition, except for the Arch Priesthood.

The procedure for nominating is simple. Send an email to us at silthoron9@ yahoo.com with the word "Nomination" in the subject. We will take it from there. Letters of nomination should be as complete as possible. If you have examples of the person's work, please include any supporting media you have.

Each cycle, the level of the nominations improves. We look forward to another excellent round of nominees for this April.

May the Blessings of the Ancestors and the Holy Ones be with you,

Rev. Terry Power, HP
Order of the Thurible
Awards Program Administrator

SILENT AUCTION

Greetings All,

As you may recall, we implemented the Silent Auction at last September's Lustration that turned out to be very successful for raising funds to support the Correllian Nativist Tradition. Last September's Auction raised over $700.00, all from items handmade and otherwise donated by our fellow Correllians.

Well it is time again to prepare for this April, so I am asking for donated items in support of this fundraising project. Please consider supporting this project with your handmade items - art, pottery, woodwork, fabric, jewelry, a whole wide spectrum of media that so many of our members create. Or, not so artistic! consider other special items that were once on your altar or in your home that you no longer need. This is a wonderful way to transfer energy amongst our members.

As we did previously, all donated items will be featured on the Correllian.com webpage with a brief description, along with the person, and / or Temple / Shrine / or Group who donated the item.

This is a wonderful way to share your talents and support of CNT. If you enjoy what you do and want to let others see - this is a great venue to do so.

The Silent Auction will be conducted starting April 1st.thru April 21st., therefore any items will need to be received by March 20th. All items will then be put on display at Lustration being held at Watertown WI, starting April 23rd.

If you wish to participate in this project, please contact me at cntfundraisingoffice@earthlink.net

Thank You in advance for your generosity to help raise money for CNT.

Blessings, Mike
CNT Fundraising Office

Correllian Clergy Degree Program

A new membership has been created called the Correllian Clergy Degree Program. This is a 3-year program that can help you earn your Wiccan Degrees and Legal Clergy Status. Of course every lifetime and supporting member has access to this main program.

The purpose of this level is for those individuals who are interested in gaining their clergy status, and this offers an opportunity for members to do so affordably.

This program is only $49.99. To find out more:
<http://www.Witchschool.com/clergydegree.asp>

Witchschool Referral Program

Witch School, our long-time educational partner, has made an offer to the Tradition and its member Temples and groups.

Witch School has created a new Referral Program. The Tradition itself has enrolled in this program – as you can see from the button in the left-hand menu on correllian.com. You are encourage to consider enrolling your Temple or group as well, as a means of generating potential passive income.

The program works like this: members receive their own button which they can put on their website, in their email signature, etc... offering Witch School memberships. If anyone purchases a membership through your button, you will receive (approximately) 25% of the payment –that is $4 of a $19.99 yearly membership, or $25 of a $99.99 Lifetime Membership.

Each button has its own unique code which tracks payments made through it. If someone buys a membership through your button, then you get the abovementioned 25%.

If you are interested in finding out more about this program, or in signing up for it, go to www.witchschool.biz.

Witch School are offering a discount on supplies to Correllian Temples and groups in good standing: for example the Witch School books at 40% off cover price, and other discounts on the various items the school produces. If you would like to learn more about this, contact Lady Virginia at Virginia@witchschool.com and she will be happy to explain further.

These offers are being extended to all of our Correllian Temples, Proto-Temples, Witan Shrines, Formal Shrines, Personal Shrines, Orders, and Study Groups who might wish to sign up.

The Prison Ministry Formal Shrine is to function as a bridge to breach the gap between inmates that are still called by Deity and who want to learn and/or correspond with members of the Correllian Tradition. This is a dedicated group that will not judge others' past, but help them pave a way into their future growth.

If you are interested in or already assisting with any type of Prison Ministry, please consider joining. You are required to be a registered member of the Correllian Nativist Tradition and at least 21 years of age. I am looking for people to assist with correspondence, and possible mentoring of inmates. THE ORDER OF WEB WEAVERS CRYSTAL WEB MAPPING PROJECT

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: www@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

For more in-depth information, including the cost of the lessons, contact me at krystelneuman@yahoo.com

May You Blessed Be
Krystel
