Veterinary Notes R is for Rabies (b)

The information below is taken from the defra government website. Be aware that it may be subject to change with no notice.

Pet Travel Scheme

The Pet Travel Scheme (PETS) is the system that allows pet dogs, cats and ferrets from certain countries to enter the UK without quarantine as long as they meet the rules. It also means that people in the UK can take their dogs, cats and ferrets to other European Union (EU) countries, and return with them to the UK. They can also, having taken their dogs, cats and ferrets to certain non-EU countries, bring them back to the UK without the need for quarantine. The rules are to keep the UK free from rabies and certain other diseases.

The European regulation which sets the rules for dogs, cats and ferrets to travel between European Community countries and into the Community from other countries also covers the movement of other pet animals: including pet rabbits, rodents and other pets. It is against the law in Great Britain to possess certain types of animals and meeting the requirements of PETS will not change that. For details on importing commercially traded animals contact Animal Health on 01245 358383 or e-mail: AHITChelmsford@animalhealth.gsi.gov.uk

Defra is carrying out a review of UK rabies policies.

Dogs, cats and ferrets

The UK does not permit the import of dogs, cats and ferrets that have not been vaccinated against rabies. Once they have reached the minimum age for vaccination (as stated on the vaccine manufacturer's datasheet) they must be prepared in accordance with all the requirements explained on this website, taking account of the required order of preparation.

PETS only applies to dogs, cats and ferrets travelling between the UK and certain countries and territories. Dogs, cats and ferrets must not have been outside any of these countries in the 6 calendar months before entering the UK.

Before travelling, you must make sure that your pet cats and dogs (including assistance dogs) or your ferret meets all the rules of the Scheme.

Dogs, cats and ferrets entering the UK under PETS may only do so on certain sea, air and rail routes.

Dogs, cats and ferrets entering the UK from non-qualifying (unlisted) countries must spend 6 months in quarantine on arrival.

A - Z of Religions – Mormonism

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was founded in 19th century America and has over 12 million members world-wide.

Mormonism has been present in the UK since 1837 and has currently 190,000 members.

The church is called The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, or The Church of Jesus Christ.

Mormons believe their church is a restoration of the Church as conceived by Jesus and that the other Christian churches have gone astray.

The church was founded by Joseph Smith (1805 – 1844).

It was then developed by Brigham Young who migrated with the new Mormons to Salt Lake City in 1847.

Mormons believe that God has a physical body, is married, and can have children.

They also believe that humans can become gods in the afterlife.

Mormons are strongly focused on traditional family life and values.

They oppose abortion, homosexuality, unmarried sexual acts, pornography, gambling, tobacco, consuming alcohol, tea, coffee, and the use of drugs.

One of the more common misconceptions is that The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints advocates polygamy. However, this was discontinued over a century ago and the Church excommunicates anyone who practices it.

Mormons do not believe that they are the only people inspired by God and so have a tolerant attitude to other faiths.

Although Mormons are certain that their Church teaches the true doctrines of salvation, they don't see it as the only teacher of truth.

They believe that there is truth in many religions and philosophies, and that the teachings of many different great religious leaders have raised the spiritual and moral awareness of humanity.

They see all human beings as children of the Father in heaven, regardless of their beliefs.

This is demonstrated in the eleventh of their Articles of Faith:

"We claim the privilege of worshipping Almighty God according to the dictates of our own conscience, and allow all men the same privilege, let them worship how, where, or what they may."

An orca named Lolita

Lolita is a very special orca. Her survival is beyond all expectations. Of the 45 of Lolita's extended family, the Southern Resident orcas, captured and delivered to parks around the world between 1965 and 1975, all the others were dead by 1987. She is known to be courageous, yet so very gentle. She has endured 37 years of confinement while performing two shows per day, without the company of any other orca since 1980. She deserves a chance to retire to her home waters and visit with her family once again.

When Lolita was about three years old, on August 8, 1970, with her family of around 110 orcas gathered in Puget Sound, capture boats and aircraft began hurling bombs into the water to herd them into a small cove. This orca clan had been assaulted by capture teams before and knew what they had in mind. The whales split into two groups. One group, with females and their young, stayed underwater and tried to escape to the north, while the rest acted as decoys and headed east. At first the distraction worked, but eventually the mothers and young ones had to come up for air, and the aircraft saw them. The capture boats then herded them into Penn Cove on Whidbey Island. All the others soon followed, and though they were not held in the cove by nets they would not leave while members of their family were restrained.

The capture team separated six young ones like Lolita from their mothers and lifted them onto flatbed trucks for delivery to marine parks worldwide. First called Tokitae, Lolita was sold to a marine park in Miami and put in a pool only 18 feet deep, 35 feet by 80 feet across. She was placed with a young male named Hugo, taken from Lolita's family 18 months earlier. The two performed in perfect synchrony for ten years, until as Hugo matured into a large male he repeatedly bashed his head against the walls and windows, until he died of a brain aneurysm in 1980. Except for trainers and some dolphins, Lolita has been alone in the same tank since Hugo died.

The campaign for Lolita's freedom began in 1995. the campaign's proposal ensures that no harm comes to Lolita or to her family, the Southern Resident orca community, at any stage of her reintroduction, and in fact provides the best and only chance for Lolita to once again enjoy her familiar ocean environment and, if she so chooses, to return to a healthy family life.

Orcas are not like any other marine mammal known, except perhaps some closely related species not held in captivity. For example, Southern Resident orcas never leave their families. From the moment of birth there is no dispersal from their mothers and their families.

Often, four or more generations of males and females, consisting of brothers and sisters, aunts, uncles and cousins are seen, traveling and foraging together as they have their entire lives. 40-year-old males travel beside their 65 year-old mothers as they have their entire lives, with sisters and their offspring close by.

Like humans, females sometimes live to an age of 90 or more, decades past the birth of their last offspring, which is usually at around 40 to 45 years of age. These elder females are believed to be the matriarchs who guide their pods through their daily activities and teach the essential cultural skills, values and meanings that define them as a community.

This astounding family cohesion is just one element in a picture that has emerged from studies in recent years showing a wide variety of distinct orca cultures worldwide, each with its own diet, rituals, mating patterns and language. Orcas produce a wide range of subtle sounds, but each community uses a completely different repertoire of sounds.

Hagstones

Hagstones are stones that have a hole running all the way through them, and are usually found in streams or rivers, and at the seashore, where running water has created the hole in the stone.

This may be one of the reasons why they are considered so powerful, as it is a common belief that magick cannot work on running water, and these stones have been holed by running water and so retain that influence of protecting from magick. A Hagstone Hagstones are also known as Holy Stones, Holey Stones, Ephialtes Stones, Wish Stones, Nightmare Stones and Witch Riding Stones.

They were ascribed with the power of protecting people and animals from the powers of evil spirits and witches, and were often worn around the neck, or hung on the key or door to the cattle stalls or stables. Hagstones were also thought to have the property of preventing milk curdling during a thunderstorm, when evil spirits were most active. This practice continues today in parts of Britain and Europe. In some parts of Europe farmers milked their cows so that the milk passed through a hagstone.

A range of disorders were thought to be cured by hagstones, placing them under the bed was thought to relieve cramp and rheumatism, and they could prevent stomach disorders caused by Hags sitting on the stomach during the night.

In Brand's Antiquities, we find the following quote: "A stone with a hole in it hung at the bed's head will prevent the nightmare. It is therefore called a Hag Stone from that disorder which is occasioned by a Hag or Witch sitting on the stomach of the party afflicted. It also prevents witches riding horses, for which purpose it is often tied to a stable key."

In parts of Scandinavia large quantities of ale poured through a hag stone was given to an expectant mother to ease birth pains. An Arabic custom was to tie a hagstone around the neck of young camels to protect them from evil spirits and the evil eye. In some parts of Britain hagstones were fastened to the bows of boats to keep them safe when at sea.

An interesting custom was the use of hagstones as pledge stones, being held to ensure a person was telling the truth. Perhaps the most interesting properties a hagstone was thought to possess were the ability to enable the bearer to see the faerie folk, and be warded from their enchantments. Hagstones found at mounds or other such sites were considered especially powerful. For a hagstone to keep its full power it was supposed to be found by the bearer or given in love.

Larger hagstones were used for weather magick, having a cord threaded through the hole and tied, and then being swirled vigorously around the head at arms length for dispelling winds and rain clouds.

As wish stones, they were held in the palm of the left hand, and rubbed with the thumb in a deosil (clockwise) manner whilst concentrating on the intent of the wish (this technique was also used with pieces of amber). We can see this as a technique of creative visualization, using the repetitive rubbing to focus the mind and then concentrating on the desired result (the "wish").

It is interesting to note that although the left hand is used to hold, this was probably not for its "sinister" aspect, but rather so that the rubbing could be done with the dominant (for most people), more "positively aspected" right hand. This is reinforced by the fact that the rubbing is done deosil, i.e. sunwise, in an invoking manner to invoke the desired result.

Holed stones with multiple holes in were used as spell casting stones by medieval witches. The holes would be made in a stone, equidistant and in multiples of three. A cord or pebble would be passed through the holes in patterns of three, whilst the intent of the spell was repeated, usually in multiples of three. This type of spell emphasises a belief in the power of repetition to achieve a desired result.

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfil the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

The Order of Web Weavers Crystal Web Mapping Project

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers
