Bahai Birth of Baha'u'llah

Celebrates the birth in 1817 of the founder of the Baha'i faith.

Bahá'u'lláh (ba-haa-ol-laa, "Glory of God") (12 November 1817 – 29 May 1892), born Mírzá Ḥusayn-`Alí Nuri , was the founder of the Bahá'í Faith. He claimed to be the prophetic fulfilment of Bábism, a 19th-century outgrowth of Shí'ism, but in a broader sense claimed to be a messenger from God referring to the fulfilment of the eschatological expectations of Islam, Christianity, and other major religions.

Bahá'u'lláh taught that humanity is one single race and that the age has come for its unification in a global society. His claim to divine revelation resulted in persecution and imprisonment by the Persian and Ottoman authorities, and his eventual 24-year confinement in the prison city of `Akka, Palestine, where he died. In his lifetime he authored many religious works, most notably the Kitáb-i-Aqdas and the Kitáb-i-Íqán.

Celtic Myths and Legends

Who were the Celts

The Celts were members of people who spoke one of the Indo-European languages. They probably originated from Central Europe, during the late second millennium BC (late Bronze Age). Traces of their earliest existences can be found in Austria, Germany and France. They established Late Bronze/Iron Age culture called Hallstatt culture, in Austria during the 9th or 8th century BC. When the Iron Age Hallstatt began to displace the Bronze Age Hallstatt, a rich, flourishing trade existed between the Greeks and the Celtic tribes living in the region of Bavaria to Bohemia.

The Greeks called them Keltoi; the name has its root probably in the 5th century BC. While the Romans called them Galli, which is the "Gauls".

A new Iron Age culture emerged during the 6th century BC, called La Tène around the Rhine River. La Tène introduced the distinctive style, which the Celtic arts were famous for. Swords and spear were founded buried with their warriors. The Celtic society had become more warlike.

Since 600 BC, a Greek colony in southern France, had transformed into a prosperous city called Massilia (Marseille), because of its trades with the Gauls. The Gauls had adopted Greek writing system as a form of communication between them.

It was during this period that the Celts in Continental Europe reached the height of their power. It was the Golden Age of the Celtic people. They migrated as far west as Spain, and their boundary stretch towards the east, settling in the region called Galata, in the Anatolia (Turkey), the south-west coast of the Black Sea. Sometimes during 6th century BC, they crossed the English Channel, to the British Isles. The Celts who migrated to Britain became known as the Cymic Celts.

In Gaul, (France, Belgium, and the Lowlands), over twenty different Celtic tribes were identified by the time of Caesar. Some of the Celts crossed the Pyrenees into Spain sometimes between 8th to 6th century BC. The Celts settled mostly in the north and central Spain as well as in Portugal. This pushed Iberians, the native people in Spain, into moving to east and southern Spain. Some of the Celts settled and intermingled with the Iberians, produced a group of people known as the Celtiberian tribes.

During the fifth and fourth century BC, several Celtic tribes from Transalpine Gaul (southern France) penetrated the Alps and settled around the region called Cisalpine Gaul, in northern Italy (north of the river Po). Cisalpine means "This side of the Alps". The Senones were the first arrived in Italy, followed by the Insubres who settled in Lombardy. The Boii settled in a region Bononia (Bologna). The migration of the Gauls from the north, putting pressure upon the Etruscans city-states in Etruria (Tuscany), that allowed the Romans to conquered Etruscan neighbours.

In 391 BC, the Gauls (Senones) under their chieftain Brennus(?), badly mauled the Roman army in Allia. The following year, the Gauls had sacked Rome. Then the Gauls withdrew from Rome after killing and looting. According to the Roman tradition, an exiled Roman general name Marcus Furius Camillus, gathered what was left of the Roman army, defeating and driving the Gauls out of Rome. More likely the Gauls withdrew from Rome of their accord and with no resistance from the Romans.

Feline Fun

This week in Feline Fun – Easter eggs out of season.

I stepped out my kitchen door and blinked in the bright sun, not sure that I was really seeing what I thought I saw in the back yard. There they were, about a dozen pastel coloured eggs scattered around in the grass. How did they get there? Maybe the neighbours were planning an Easter egg hunt in my back yard, but they hadn't asked me about it, and besides it was July. They're not getting away with that, I thought, and went back inside and got a basket, and began to lay the eggs in it.

When I picked up the first one, though, I realized that it wasn't a real egg at all. It was too heavy, and the shell was hard and smooth, almost like metallic but not quite. The rest were the same, and I gathered them all into the basket and brought the basket into the kitchen, setting it down on the kitchen table. I picked up a mint green one and tried to crack it open on the table, but it wouldn't crack. Then I got a hammer and beat away on it. I couldn't even make a dent.

I put the hammer down to think what to do next, when suddenly the egg began unscrewing itself. One half fell off and out hopped a tiny mint green creature, with large feet, a small round body and an angular head containing bulging eyes. The other eggs also began unscrewing and similar pastel coloured creatures jumped out of them, each matching the colour of their shell.

The first one looked at me and I looked back, so dumbfounded that I couldn't do anything else. As I sat there staring, a thought came to me, a thought which wasn't my own but felt strongly as though it radiated from the creature. "Earthling! Stop trying to destroy my space ship. You won't succeed anyway."

I still couldn't speak but thoughts formed in my mind, "What's going on? Is that you doing that? What are you, anyway?"

Its telepathic thoughts came back. "I am Nan. We are the Syxkx. I am the leader of a scout party from my planet. Our sun is about to go nova and we are looking for another planet to settle on."

I thought, "Well, maybe we don't want you settling on our planet. What are you going to do, try to kill us all? We may have our own ideas about that."

Nan responded, "Oh, we won't kill you. We will just live among you and make you our slaves. We will need someone to cater to our every need."

I was in the process of formulating some clever rejoinder to that when my calico cat, Alfred, apparently aware of the commotion, gracefully leapt up onto the table. He saw the Syxkx and immediately arched his back and hissed his best hiss. All the tiny Syxkx recoiled in fear, and Nan's bulging eyes bulged out even further. Just when I thought I was beyond further amazement, Alfred also began radiating thoughts, directed primarily at the aliens but understandable by me.

"What are you doing on our planet, Syxkx?"

Nan repeated what he had communicated to me, that their sun was about to nova, that they were looking for another planet to settle on, and that if they came here they would enslave us humans.

"You are too late," replied Alfred mentally. "We came to this planet and settled it ten thousand years ago. We like it here and are not going anywhere and are not about to share it with you Syxkx. You are right about one thing, though, these humans do make excellent slaves."

"Okay, cat, you made your point," thought back Nan. "We will cross this planet off and find another one."

The Syxkx all hopped back in their eggs, the eggs screwed themselves together, lifted into the air, circled around the kitchen once, and then flew in formation out through an open window.

Alfred looked up at me with his big green cat eyes. He didn't radiate any more thoughts, but just mewed his usual "feed me" mew.

I fed him.

Quote & Thought for the Day

Quote of the Day:

Man often becomes what he believes himself to be.
if I keep on saying to myself that I cannot do a certain thing, it is possible that I may end
by really becoming incapable of doing it.
On the contrary,
if I have the belief that I can do it,
I shall surely acquire the capacity to do it,
even if I may not have it at the beginning.

Mahatma Gandhi

Thought of the day:

Awaken your ability

There are capabilities you have that you don't yet know you have. Meaningful challenges will awaken those capabilities and get them working for you. It is in the effort that you fully develop the ability to successfully make that effort. The way to know what you can do, is to do.

Go ahead. Get started, and as you go forward you'll get better.

As you go forward, your skills, your knowledge, and your effectiveness will grow continually stronger. In your commitment to take on the challenges, you'll find everything necessary to successfully meet those challenges.

Set your goals based not on what you know you can do. Set your goals based on what you're most passionate about.

Choose to do what you know, at your very core, you must do. The abilities you awaken will add value to every corner of your life.

Earliest Reference Describes Christ as 'Magician'

A team of scientists led by renowned French marine archaeologist Franck Goddio recently announced that they have found a bowl, dating to between the late 2nd century B.C. and the early 1st century A.D., that is engraved with what they believe could be the world's first known reference to Christ. If the word "Christ" refers to the Biblical Jesus Christ, as is speculated, then the discovery may provide evidence that Christianity and paganism at times intertwined in the ancient world.

The full engraving on the bowl reads, "DIA CHRSTOU O GOISTAIS," which has been interpreted by the excavation team to mean either, "by Christ the magician" or, "the magician by Christ."

"It could very well be a reference to Jesus Christ, in that he was once the primary exponent of white magic," Goddio, co-founder of the Oxford Center of Maritime Archaeology, said. He and his colleagues found the object during an excavation of the underwater ruins of Alexandria's ancient great harbor. The Egyptian site also includes the now submerged island of Antirrhodos, where Cleopatra's palace may have been located.

Both Goddio and Egyptologist David Fabre, a member of the European Institute of Submarine Archaeology, think a "magus" could have practiced fortune telling rituals using the bowl. The Book of Matthew refers to "wisemen," or Magi, believed to have been prevalent in the ancient world.

According to Fabre, the bowl is also very similar to one depicted in two early Egyptian earthenware statuettes that are thought to show a soothsaying ritual.

"It has been known in Mesopotamia probably since the 3rd millennium B.C.," Fabre said. "The soothsayer interprets the forms taken by the oil poured into a cup of water in an interpretation guided by manuals."

He added that the individual, or "medium," then goes into a hallucinatory trance when studying the oil in the cup.

"They therefore see the divinities, or supernatural beings appear that they call to answer their questions with regard to the future," he said.

The magus might then have used the engraving on the bowl to legitimize his supernatural powers by invoking the name of Christ, the scientists theorize.

Goddio said, "It is very probable that in Alexandria they were aware of the existence of Jesus" and of his associated legendary miracles, such as transforming water into wine, multiplying loaves of bread, conducting miraculous health cures, and the story of the resurrection itself. While not discounting the Jesus Christ interpretation, other researchers have offered different possible interpretations for the engraving, which was made on the thin-walled ceramic bowl after it was fired, since slip was removed during the process.

Bert Smith, a professor of classical archaeology and art at Oxford University, suggests the engraving might be a dedication, or present, made by a certain “Chrestos” belonging to a possible religious association called Ogoistais.

Klaus Hallof, director of the Institute of Greek inscriptions at the Berlin-Brandenburg Academy, added that if Smith’s interpretation proves valid, the word “Ogoistais” could then be connected to known religious groups that worshipped early Greek and Egyptian gods and goddesses, such as Hermes, Athena and Isis.

Hallof additionally pointed out that historians working at around, or just after, the time of the bowl, such as Strabon and Pausanias, refer to the god “Osogo” or “Ogoa,” so a variation of this might be what’s on the bowl. It is even possible that the bowl refers to both Jesus Christ and Osogo.

Fabre concluded, “It should be remembered that in Alexandria, paganism, Judaism and Christianity never evolved in isolation. All of these forms of religion (evolved) magical practices that seduced both the humble members of the population and the most well-off classes.”

“It was in Alexandria where new religious constructions were made to propose solutions to the problem of man, of God’s world,” he added. “Cults of Isis, mysteries of Mithra, and early Christianity bear witness to this.” The bowl is currently on public display in the exhibit “Egypt’s Sunken Treasures” at the Matadero Cultural Center in Madrid, Spain, until November 15.

Poets Retreat

The Beach

Standing still
Upon the great rock
Amongst many others
But this rock was mighty
And I looked out
At the flowing river
Heading west and beyond
And I spoke of gratitude
For everything I see
Feel, taste, and touch
And humbly said thank you
For things
Such as these...
Blue blue river
Passes
Through crystal canyons
And mountain sides
An eagle rides
The blowing currents
Plucking fish at will
And the cool autumn air
Fills my grateful lungs
And lights my spirit
And I shine
So very bright
Alive and powerful
One with air, fire, water, and earth
I'm the eagle, I am the wind
I am the fish
New life begins
And every morning
Every night
I come here, my beach,
My special place
To just say thank you
To show respect
And I start each day
And end each night
So mighty rock
Hold me up high
As I look out
At my hometown
Across the river
And say thank you

Calling all Translators

If you have a second language to English that you are fluent in please consider joining the Witcheschool Translators and help translate material

We want to help Don stand tall and proud at his first presentation to the Interfaith World, and state that the Tradition deserves to be recognized by the most respected Interfaith Body “The Parliament of World’s Religions”

On December 3rd, 2009, Rev. Don Lewis will be at the Parliament of the World’s Religions and this will be a major chance to present the Correllian tradition to the world. Currently he is planning to bring copies of The Five Mystic Secrets (in 7 Languages), What is Wicca? (Three Languages) and The Comic “Come Join Us for a Wiccan Ritual” (Two Languages). We also plan to share those classes already translated.

We are looking for help getting What is Wicca? Translated at least into Spanish, and maybe more languages. We currently have French, German and English. It is my hope that we can have more languages represented. I know it’s a big favor to ask. We will need it by November 25th, 2009. The more languages the better, of course, and we do appreciate any help we can get.

THE ORDER OF WEB WEAVERS CRYSTAL WEB MAPPING PROJECT

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: www@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

For more in-depth information, including the cost of the lessons, contact me at krystelneuman@yahoo.com

May You Blessed Be Krystel
