Banishing, Casting out addictions, illness, or negativity.

Today is a celebration for women only in Rome today. In fact, no men were permitted to celebrate or attend at all nor were they even allowed to here the Goddess' name spoken—that Goddess being Bona Dea. And today is all about her and her Observance. Her temple was built in Aventine and she represented the Earth and everything that sprang from it.

However, if we jog on over to Greece, they are celebrating their Goddess Rhea. Today is one of those days that we see the similarities between Greece and Rome and how they seemed to share their God's and Goddesses, only changing their names to suit their Culture.

Rhea is the Goddess of growth, procreation, vines, wine, and agriculture. (Remember above, Bona Dea is earth and 'all that sprang from it')

Rhea was believed to have shined brightest in Crete, during the Minoan civilization.

Rhea, however, did something even more remarkable. It is believed that she actually gave the Greeks their knowledge of building their cities—their beautiful architecture and so forth.

Now today is also sacred to Cybele—Phrygian Goddess known as Mother Earth—the same as the Greek Gaia and also their Rhea. (Keep Bona Rea in the back of your mind) because Cybele also is a goddess of caverns and mountains, walls and fortresses, nature, wild animals (especially lions and bees). Wikipedia links and source.

The cult Cybele, the "Magna Mater, the Mother Goddess of Phrygia, was brought to Rome in 205/4 BCE. The Goddess was served by self-emasculated priests known as galli. Until the emperor Claudius, Roman citizens could not become priests of Cybele, but after that worship of her and her lover Attis took their place in the state cult. One aspect of the cult was the use of baptism in the blood of a bull, a practice later taken over by Mithraism.

Mistletoe

The Mistletoe Magic:

From the earliest times mistletoe has been one of the most magical, mysterious, and sacred plants of European folklore. It was considered to bestow life and fertility; a protection against poison; and an aphrodisiac. The mistletoe of the sacred oak was especially sacred to the ancient Celtic Druids. On the sixth night of the moon white-robed Druid priests would cut the oak mistletoe with a golden sickle. Two white bulls would be sacrificed amid prayers that the recipients of the mistletoe would prosper. Later, the ritual of cutting the mistletoe from the oak came to symbolize the emasculation of the old King by his successor. Mistletoe was long regarded as both a sexual symbol and the "soul" of the oak. It was gathered at both mid-summer and winter solstices, and the custom of using mistletoe to decorate houses at Christmas is a survival of the Druid and other pre-Christian traditions. The Greeks also thought that it had mystical powers and down through the centuries it became associated with many folklore customs. In the Middle Ages and later, branches of mistletoe were hung from ceilings to ward off evil spirits. In Europe they were placed over house and stable doors to prevent the entrance of witches. It was also believed that the oak mistletoe could extinguish fire. This was associated with an earlier belief that the mistletoe itself could come to the tree during a flash of lightning. The traditions which began with the European mistletoe were transferred to the similar American plant with the process of immigration and settlement.

Kissing under the Mistletoe

Kissing under the mistletoe is first found associated with the Greek festival of Saturnalia and later with primitive marriage rites. They probably originated from two beliefs. One belief was that it has power to bestow fertility. It was also believed that the dung from which the mistletoe would also possess "life-giving" power. In Scandinavia, mistletoe was considered a plant of peace, under which enemies could declare a truce or warring spouses kiss and make-up. Later, the eighteenth-century English credited with a certain magical appeal called a kissing ball. At Christmas time a young lady standing under a ball of mistletoe, brightly trimmed with evergreens, ribbons, and ornaments, cannot refuse to be kissed. Such a kiss could mean deep romance or lasting friendship and goodwill. If the girl remained unknissed, she cannot expect not to marry the following year. In some parts of England the Christmas mistletoe is burned on the twelfth night lest all the boys and girls who have knissed under it never marry. Whether we believe it or not, it always makes for fun and frolic at Christmas celebrations. Even if the pagan significance has been long forgotten, the custom of exchanging a kiss under the mistletoe can still be found in many European countries as well as in Canada. Thus if a couple in love exchanges a kiss under the mistletoe, it is interpreted as a promise to marry, as well as a prediction of happiness and long life. In France, the custom linked to mistletoe was reserved for New Year's Day: "Au gui l'An neuf" (Mistletoe for the New Year). Today, kisses can be exchanged under the mistletoe any time during the holiday season.

The Legend

For its supposedly mystical power mistletoe has long been at the center of many folklore. One is associated with the Goddess Frigga. The story goes that Mistletoe was the sacred plant of Frigga, goddess of love and the mother of Balder, the god of the summer sun. Balder had a dream of death which greatly alarmed his mother, for should he die, all life on earth would end. In an attempt to keep this from happening, Frigga went at once to air, fire, water, earth, and every animal and plant seeking a promise that no harm would come to her son. Balder now could not be hurt by anything on earth or under the earth. But Balder had one enemy, Loki, god of evil and he knew of one plant that Frigga had overlooked in her quest to keep her son safe. It grew neither on the earth nor under the earth, but on apple and oak trees. It was lowly mistletoe. So Loki made an arrow tip of the mistletoe, gave to the blind god of winter, Hoder, who shot it, striking Balder dead. The sky paled and all things in earth and heaven wept for the sun god. For three days each element tried to bring Balder back to life. He was finally restored by Frigga, the goddess and his mother. It is said the tears she shed for her son turned into the pearly white berries on the mistletoe plant and in her joy Frigga kissed everyone who passed beneath the tree on which it grew. The story ends with a decree that who should ever stand under the humble mistletoe, no harm should befall them, only a kiss, a token of love. What could be more natural than to translate the spirit of this old myth into a Christian way of thinking and accept the mistletoe as the emblem of that Love which conquers Death? Its medicinal properties, whether real or imaginary, make it a just emblematic of that Tree of Life, the leaves of which are for the healing of the nations thus paralleling it to the Virgin Birth of Christ.

Holly

Folklore and Myths

Holly is commonly used all over the world as a Christmas decoration, a custom derived from the early Romans who sent boughs of Holly and other gifts to their friends during Saturnalia, the Roman festival of Saturn held around the 17th of December to celebration of the Winter Solstice. In an old Christian legend the Holly is said to have sprung up under the footsteps of Christ as he trod the earth, the spines of the leaves became symbolic of “Crown of Thorns”, the red berries representing the drops of blood associated with his suffering. From this symbology the Holly tree became known as “Christ’s Thorn” or the “Holy Tree”.

In pagan folklore the Holly tree is associated with the spirit of vegetation and the waning forces of nature, to which he is personified as a mythical figure called the Holly King. The Holly King rules nature during its decline from the mid-summer solstice (Litha - Jun 21st) through to the mid-winter solstice (Yule – Dec 21st). At each of the solstice Sabbats, the Holly King and his brother the Oak King engage in ritual combat for the attentions of the Goddess, from whence the victor presides over nature through the following half of the year.

In his personification as the Holly King, he is often depicted as an old man dressed in winter clothing wearing a wreath of Holly on his head and walking with the aid of a staff made from a Holly branch. This is symbolic of the fertile interaction of the Goddess and God during nature’s decline and the darkest time of the year. At Yule after his battle with the Oak King, the new light of the sun-God re-emerges to encourage fresh growth during the coming new year. After the advent of Christianity, and during their Christmas and New Year celebrations, a man would be dressed up and covered in Holly branches and leaves, while a woman was likewise dressed in Ivy (the female counterpart of Holly) and together paraded through the streets leading the old year into the new.

Pliny the Elder (AD 23-79) a Roman naturalist in his classic “Historia Naturalis”, an old world encyclopaedic study of plants and animal life, tells us that if Holly is planted near a house or farm, it would repel poison and defend it from lightning and witchcraft. Also that its flowers cause water to freeze and that its wood when thrown at an animal, even without touching it, had the power to compel the animal to return and lie down.

Magical Uses

As with most other trees the Holly was revered for its protective qualities. When planted around the home it protects the inhabitants and guards against lightening, poisoning and mischievous spirits. When confronted by wild animals throwing a stick of Holly at them would make them lie down and leave you alone. A piece of Holly carried on your person is said to promote good luck, particularly in men for the Holly is a male plant (the Ivy its opposite female). As a charm to enhance dreams, nine Holly leaves gathered on a Friday after midnight, wrapped in a clean cloth to protect against its needles, and tied up using nine knots was placed under a pillow to make dreams come true.

Some old stories tell us that when winter came the old druids advised the people to take Holly into their homes to shelter the elves and fairies who could join mortals at this time without causing them harm, but these stories also tell of a warning, to make sure and remove the Holly entirely before the eve of Imbolc, for to leave just one leaf in the house would cause misfortune. An old Scottish tradition says that no branch should be cut from a Holly tree, but rather it should be pulled free in a method considered fit for sacred tree. It was also considered unlucky to fell a Holly tree or burn its green skinned branches. Yet luck was increased if a small branch was kept and hung outside of the house, there it would continue to protect against lightening.

In ritual uses, Holly is associated with the life, death and re-birth symbolism of Lughnassadh/Lammas, the first harvest of the year. Holly also symbolizes holiness, consecration, material gain, physical revenge, beauty, immortality, peace, goodwill and health. Holly water (infused or distilled) was sprinkled on newborn babies to protect them. It can be used ritually to aid and help with a person's ability to cope with death, and to ease their sleep with peaceful dreams. The Holly has always been associated with mid winter festivals and was used in old Celtic traditions for celebrating the Sun Gods re-birth at the Winter Solstice.

The wood of the Holly tree burns very hot and its charcoal was used to forge the swords, knives and tools necessary for survival and protection. The old smithies and weapon-makers were considered to be great magicians for their ability to use the elements of fire and earth to create these tools. For this reason the druids associated Holly with the element of fire. In the ogham alphabet they called the Holly "Tinne", which is thought to mean "fire" derived from the word "tinder", in association with the Holly's timber used in the fires of the old smithies. In today's rituals, Holly is used for magick associated with the element of fire and Holly incense is used to consecrate the magickal knife (athame).

The Holly tree deity associations are with: Lugh, Tannus, Taranis and Thor, as well as Tailtiu, Habondia and Tina Etruscan. Its gender type is Masculine. Its planetary ruler is Mars and its associated element is Fire. The bird associated with the month of the Holly is the starling. Holly is used to attract the powers needed for: Protection, Consecration, Healing, Peace, Goodwill, Luck and anything to do with the element Fire.

Astrologically Holly people (i.e. those people born in the month of July) come alive at winter and delight in the cold that most people dislike. They are very balanced in a fight, provided the cause is a just one. They are bearers of truth and demand truth from their friends and associates. They are honest, hardworking and very tolerant of changing situations. They tend to see both sides in an argument but will choose a side if they have to. They also tend to be spiritually advanced but may be clueless to being that way. They can also be showy at times and seek attention.

A Tale of Project Sactuary - Guiding Souls

Part 3 & 3

Rev. Mehitabel

I was busy doing the washing up when I felt the call of a soul in dire need. I set off immediately, following the direction of the call and emerged on a rocky and rugged coastline. The landscape reminded me of the Cornish coast, but there was no chance of appreciating the scenery as the shore was being lashed by high winds and mammoth waves. Squally showers added to the discomfort.

I quickly erected an energy shield around myself to keep off the wind, rain and cold. This protected I headed along the cliff until I found a winding path down to the sands. I made my way down, treading carefully for the ground was treacherous, and finally reached the small beach. On the far side of the cove I spotted my lost soul huddled in the wreckage of a small boat. The waves were coming too close for comfort as I made my way towards him. He was a middle-aged man, clutching a soaking teddy bear. I approached him and extended my shield to encompass him. He looked up at me and begged me to help him find his wife and child. I realised then that this soul had passed beyond the veil but had yet to realise this. I tried to ask him his name but he was incoherent and just kept asking for his family. I gently urged him to his feet and guided him towards the cliff. I opened a portal in the cliff face and transported us to a way station. This was a small cottage in a clearing in an oak forest. It was pleasant and inviting. A single room with a log fire, a stove, table, and a comfortable bed. I guided him to the latter and settled him there while I prepared a herbal drink to calm and warm him. As I hoped he fell asleep and I let him rest and heal.

I now needed to find his family. I called the elementals of the wood and asked their aid, for they were always very obliging and eager to help. They dashed off and returned far quicker than I expected with news that the family was over the far side of the wood.

I returned to the cottage where the man still slept. His features were more relaxed now and I hoped that some of the strain had left him. I roused him gently and told him I had news of his family. He looked up hopefully and I told him I would take him to them now. I offered him food before he left but he was keen to leave.

I led the way through the woods guided by one of the elementals, and while we walked I asked him his name and how he came to be on the beach. He told me his name was Edward, and he had been sailing with his wife Dorothy and children Ben and Grace who were 7 and 4 respectively. It was Grace's bear that he was holding. He said that the day had been fine and clear and the sea calm so they went out a bit further than usual. A squall came out of nowhere and the boat overturned. He lost sight of his family in the high seas, and clinging to the boat was swept into the cove where I found him.

By now we had reached the far side of the wood. The elemental indicated a large tree with a hollow in its trunk resembling a door. I moved towards it and found it allowed easy access, and so, with Edward in tow I stepped through the tree and emerged into a strange land. Here everything had a hazy, misty look, as if peering through a net curtain. There was an overwhelming feeling of peace and serenity.

In the distance, coming towards us was a woman and two children. As soon as he saw them Edward began to run until he had them in his arms. I followed slowly, not wanting to invade on this private moment.

Edward turned to me with thanks and began to ask the way back to his home. Gently I explained that this was a time for new beginnings, and that his old world was behind him. As we spoke, a tall androgynous being dressed in flowing white robes approached. I told them that this was their guardian angel and that he would take them on to their new abode. The aura of love, peace and gentleness from the angel engulfed us all, and Edward and his family turned willingly to go with him, pausing only to thank me for reuniting them.. I watched them disappear out of sight and hoped that their path now would be easy, and then I too left this land, returning to my neglected washing up.

Pilot 4

The call of a soul in distress could come at any time and in any place sounding like the ringing of an internal bell. When this latest alert came through I was sat on a crowded bus in a traffic jam and welcomed the chance to escape to the energy realms.

This call did not take me into the deepest realms of the energy lands, but instead took me to the marginal world that adjoins our own. I emerged inside a hospital in a neonatal care unit where a couple were watching their new baby as it fought for life in an incubator. While in the marginal land, I was invisible to those in the room. Already I could see the soul of the baby beginning to separate from its physical body and I knew that it would only live a few minutes more. A host of alarms started ringing, the mother burst into hysterical sobs and the baby's soul rose from its body.

I moved towards it and gathered it to me. There was something unusual about this soul for normally the guardian angels were on hand to comfort and guide. Holding it in my arms I looked into its eyes and saw the experience of many lifetimes and many worlds. I realised then that this little one had a different path to follow and that it would not be returning to the spirit world and thence to another physical form.

Still holding the child, I moved back through the marginal lands and into the energy worlds themselves. I found myself in a desert land, areas of red baked earth, sparse rough scrub and strange rock formations. I was drawn to one particular rock, a high outcrop of red stone rising up above the desert and began to climb to the very top. As I did so night fell so that by the time I reached the peak it was fully dark. The sky was clear and the stars shone brightly and clearly.

I knew now, instinctively, where this tiny soul was headed. Holding it firmly in my hands I raised it skywards and released it into the air, watching as it rose higher and higher, glowing brighter and brighter as it did so, until it joined the many stars above. For that soul was a star child and had returned home.

I had one more task still to do before I left this realm. Heading back to the marginal lands I came to a typical suburban house where the parents of the baby were sitting in total misery in their front room. All around them were new and unused baby things. Their guardian angels stood by helplessly, unable to intervene without a direct request.

The parents were in desperate need of comfort, and I had an idea how to bring it to them. I created a thought of pure energy, as are all thoughts, and sent it to the father. He looked up towards the window and suggested to his wife that they go outside for some fresh air. She demurred at first but finally agreed and they both stepped out into the star-lit garden. As they stood, looking upward, the new star that was their baby created a shower of silver light filled with miniature stars that fell on its one-time parents. The light sank into them and was absorbed by them, merging with the energy of their souls, and bringing with it comfort and peace and a new awareness. At this moment, the angels stepped forward, enclosing them in an embrace of love and peace, for this time these two newly aware souls invited their angels to help.

I stepped back, knowing that they would now be fine, and knowing too that they would have another child within the year, a child who would be healthy and strong. And so I returned to the crowded bus that, thankfully, was just reaching the end of the traffic jam.

The Pagans Meet and Begin Rattling at the Parliament

Ed Hubbard

Before the official Parliament opening, Angie Buchanan and Phyllis Currot hosted a Meet and Greet for the Pagan community in their suite. While held in the mid afternoon, it drew Pagans from several countries, and totaled over 50 people. It was so packed it was nearly impossible to count. Nearly every presenter was there including Dr. Michael York, the Entire Earth Spirit Delegation, and David Garland (President of Pagan Awareness Network) to name a few. It was a great time, and a important reaffirmation of why we were all came to the Parliament.

River Higginbotham, a Parliament Ambassador presented the ‘Bridge to the Meeting Place Rattles’. He asked us to rattle them and add our energy. He also explained that they will be handed around and used throughout the Parliament in various ways and rituals. At the end, these rattles will be given to the Council of the Parliament of World Religions, The Melbourne Council of Parliament of World Religions, The Indigenous people of Australia, and the Dalia Lama.

Let me offer the words of the artist in describing this: The Pagan Community has collaborated with talented American Pagan Artist, Julee A. Higginbotham to gift these sacred art objects to the Parliament of the World’s Religions and distinguished leaders; in honor of the indigenous peoples of Australia and in celebration of the Pagan traditions of the world.

Symbolizing the Intention to “bridge” the cultures, traditions and compassion of the world, these beautiful art pieces commemorate a common “meeting place”, where by the People of the Earth can come together, and work together on issues that affect us all, no matter how we choose to worship; world peace, religious and cultural tolerance, survival of our peoples, and sustainability of our planet, Mother Earth.

Over all, we will follow the journey of the rattles and will show as many of the images of people adding energy to them.

Another discussion of importance brought up was that the Pagan Participants at this event really needed to move beyond simply Pagan programming, and to attend other presentations, especially environmental. Angie pointed out that while Pagan presenters are doing ritual, presentations for faith, history and even education, not a single Pagan was asked or given any spaces in the environmental area. Pagans were locked out of this crucial area, and that we need to make our presence felt during these presentations. So yes, while we have come far, we still have a long way to go to have the Pagan Voice heard where we feel our issues are most important.

The Meet and Greet was closed by Mother Tongue, that favorite Pagan Choir, and they favored us with two songs, which we are fortunate to share with you. This was a great pre-event that help us all understand our strengths and our challenges of our events.

Quote & Thought of the Day

Quote of the Day:

Like attracts like.

Whatever the conscious mind thinks and believes.

The subconscious identically creates.

Thought of the day:

Fill your world

Be a friend, and you will have a friend. Give, and you receive.

Teach, and you will learn. Offer encouragement, and you'll be lifted up.

Listen intently, seeking to truly understand, and you will be understood. Be respectful and you'll be respected.

Life is a mirror that reflects back to you what you think, what you expect, what you feel, and what you do. The way to improve the reflection is to improve what's being reflected.

Be the love, be the compassion, be the strength, be the responsibility that you wish to see in others. Be the best example you can imagine and you'll be pleased with how your example is followed.

The way you most sincerely live is magnified by all that is around you. Live true to your highest purpose, and that purpose expands to fill your world.

We want to help Don stand tall and proud at his first presentation to the Interfaith World, and state that the Tradition deserves to be recognized by the most respected Interfaith Body “The Parliament of World’s Religions”

On December 3rd, 2009, Rev. Don Lewis will be at the Parliament of the World’s Religions and this will be a major chance to present the Correllian tradition to the world. Currently he is planning to bring copies of The Five Mystic Secrets (in 7 Languages), What is Wicca? (Three Languages) and The Comic “Come Join Us for a Wiccan Ritual” (Two Languages). We also plan to share those classes already translated.

We are looking for help getting What is Wicca? Translated at least into Spanish, and maybe more languages. We currently have French, German and English. THE ORDER OF WEB WEAVERS CRYSTAL WEB MAPPING PROJECT

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: www@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

For more in-depth information, including the cost of the lessons, contact me at krystelneuman@yahoo.com

May You Blessed Be
Krystel
