Legends and Lore of Beltane

By Patti Wigington

In many cultures, there are different legends and lore surrounding Beltane. Here are a few of the stories about this magical spring celebration.

Like Samhain, the holiday of Beltane is a time when the veil between the worlds is thin. Some traditions believe that this is a good time to contact the spirits, or to interact with the Fae. Be careful, though -- if you visit the Faerie Realm, don't eat the food, or you'll be trapped there, much like Thomas the Rhymer was!

Some Irish dairy farmers hang a garland of green boughs over their door at Beltane. This will bring them great milk production from their cows during the coming summer. Also, driving your cattle between two Beltane bonfires helps protect your livestock from disease.

The pious Puritans were outraged by the debauchery of Beltane celebrations. In fact, they made Maypoles illegal in the mid 1600's, and tried to put a halt to the "greenwood marriages" that frequently took place on May Eve. One pastor wrote that if "tenne maiden went to set (celebrate) May, nine of them came home gotten with childe."

According to a legend in parts of Wales and England, women who are trying to conceive should go out on May Eve -- the last night of April -- and find a "birthing stone", which is a large rock formation with a hole in the center. Walk through the hole, and you will conceive a child that night. If there is nothing like this near you, find a small stone with a hole in the center, and drive a branch of oak or other wood through the hole -- place this charm under your bed to make you fertile.

If you go out at sunrise on Beltane, take a bowl or jar to gather morning dew. Use the dew to wash your face, and you're guaranteed a perfect complexion. You can also use the dew in ritual as consecrated water, particularly in rituals related to the moon or the goddess Diana or her counterpart, Artemis.

In the Irish Book of Invasions, it was on Beltane that Patholan, the first settler, arrived on Ireland's shores. May Day was also the date of the defeat of the Tuatha de Danaan by Amergin and the Milesians.

Babies conceived at Beltane are considered a gift from the gods. They were sometimes referred to as "merry-begots", because the mothers were impregnated during Beltane's merrymaking.

In Cornwall, it's traditional to decorate your door on May Day with boughs of hawthorn and sycamore.

Eating a special oatcake called a bannock or a Beltane cake ensured Scottish farmers abundance of their crops for the year. The cakes were baked the night before, and roasted in embers on a stone.

What the Mayan Calendar says about December 21 2012

The Mayans were a remarkably advanced culture, sophisticated and mathematically and astronomically knowledgeable. Their mathematic and astronomy intelligence allowed them to create a detailed and specific calendar, of which December 21, 2012, is one of those specific dates.

The Mayan calendar actually is not just one calendar, but a system of calendars that, when used collectively, determine a number of cycles.

The Tzolk'in calendar has 260 days and was the ritual year; the Haab' calendar has 365 days, the solar year – used together, they form a cycle of 52 Haabs before they align.

A longer calendar, the Long Count (or World Time), was based on the beginning of the world according to Mayan mythology in a full cycle of 5125.36 year cycles and provides accurate dates when used in conjunction with positions of the other calendars.

The conclusion of all calendars made by the Mayans ends on December 21, 2012. After that date, there is no data provided by the Mayans, no predictions for the future. It is presumed that this means that there is nothing for the human race beyond the 2012 date.

Because the Mayans had keen knowledge of astronomy, their secret codex that describes sunspot cycles may indicate that the world's end could mean a solar flare disrupts the magnetic polarity of the earth, called geomagnetic reversal.

The earth has several periodic geomagnetic reversals in approximately 760000 year cycles, and a solar flare could contribute to the reversal for which we are already overdue. Scientists do not know what will happen during a geomagnetic reversal – some theorize that nothing will happen except electromagnetic instruments and cell phones will be affected.

Human ancestors have survived a geomagnetic reversal before, but it is also thought that the reversal could cause crustal shifts that cause earthquakes, volcanoes, tsunamis, and widespread natural catastrophe ... and that the 2012 date marks the day that this super-disaster might be predicted, when polar reversal will occur, marking a period of great upheaval and perhaps human extinction.

The 2012 date may also have cosmic significance, where several orbit planes, including the Earth's, the sun's, and the galaxy's, will align in a place that the Mayans called the Sacred Tree.

On December 21, 2012, the winter solstice sun will be right on the galactic band of orbit. Reaching this point is considered an even greater spiritual significance, one that could affect the energy balance of the world – perhaps causing global upheaval, or perhaps causing global enlightenment.

The end of the Mayan calendar is still a mystery, and while the mystery of 2012 leans toward the apocalyptic, there is a chance that it is simply a point of renewal.

Arthurian Legends

Camelot Part C

Who is the real Arthur

According to the Welsh historian Nennius, who flourished in the early 9th century, this victory (at Badon Hills) was associated with Arthur. Nennius wrote in his Historia Brittonum that eleven other victories were ascribed to Arthur, but he was more of British warlord or general, than a king. Nennius pushed the date of the battle of Mons Badonicus, to a later time, in AD 516. This was the first mention of Arthur in the historical (psuedo-historial) source.

Then it was, that the magnanimous Arthur, with all the kings and military force of Britain, fought against the Saxons. And though there were many more noble than himself, yet he was twelve times chosen their commander, and was as often conqueror. The first battle in which he was engaged, was at the mouth of the river Gleni. The second, third, fourth, and fifth, were on another river, by the Britons called Duglas, in the region Linuis. The sixth, on the river Bassas. The seventh in the wood Celidon, which the Britons call Cat Coit Celidon. The eighth was near Gurnion castle, where Arthur bore the image of the Holy Virgin, mother of God, upon his shoulders, and through the power of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the holy Mary, put the Saxons to flight, and pursued them the whole day with great slaughter. The ninth was at te City of Legion, which is called Cair Lion. The tenth was on the banks of the river Trat Treuroit. The eleventh was on the mountain Breguoin, which we call Cat Bregion. The twelfth was a most severe contest, when Arthur penetrated to the hill of Badon. In this engagement, nine hundred and forty fell by his hand alone, no one but the Lord affording him assistance. In all these engagements the Britons were successful. For no strength can avail against the will of the Almighty.

Historia Brittonum

by Nennius (c. AD 796)

Edited by J. A. Giles

Six Old English Chronicles

Henry G. Bohn, London, 1848

Nennius had later also recorded that Arthur had a carn built at Buel for his dog Cabal, which had used in his hunt for the boar Troynt. On top of this stone pile is the pawprint of Cabal. Could this wildboar Troynt be Twrch Trwyth in the tale of Culhwch and Olwen? And he also mentioned the burial site of Anir, the son of Arthur. It was Arthur who had killed his own son.

Nennius also recorded the episode of Vortigern and Hengist, but added a new person associated with Vortigern, Ambrosius. This Ambrosius is not the same Ambrosius Aurelianus mentioned in the works by Gildas and Bede. No. This Ambrosius was another name for the boy prophet, whom Geoffrey called Merlin. The story of Vortigern and Ambrosius (Merlin), the falling wall and the two sleeping dragons influenced Geoffrey's own work (see Vortigern in Life of King Arthur).

From the Annales Cambriae (the Annals of Wales) from 10th century, Arthur won the battle in Mons Badonicus (Mons Badon) and some other victories as well. The Annales also mentioned in a short passage that Arthur and Medraut (Mordred) falling in the battle of Camlann (537).

AD 516 The Battle of Badon, in which Arthur carried the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ for three days and three nights on his shoulders and the Britons were the victors.

AD 537 The battle of Camlann, in which Arthur and Medraut fell: and there was plague in Britain and Ireland.

Annales Cambriae
Translated by Ingram, James
The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle
Everyman Press, London, 1912

As it can be seen, Geoffrey had derived his sources, mainly from Nennius, but also from the Gildas, Bede and the Annales Cambriae. However, Geoffrey set the year of Arthur's fall a little later on 542. Also, Geoffrey had cleverly turned Ambrosius Aurlianus into Aurelius Ambrosius, an uncle of Arthur.

Most of the earliest legends of Arthur, before Geoffrey, come from Welsh sources, between the 8th and 10th century.

So, whether Arthur exist or not, still remain in doubt.

If there was ever a true Arthur in history, he would probably be Romano-British warleader, probably named Artorius, which is a Roman name for Arthur. Though the Roman legions may have left Britain in AD 410, the general population of mixed Romans and Celts, would have had generations of Roman law, education, culture and way of life.

The name, Artorius, is similar enough to the Gallic god of the bear, Artaius or Artaios. The Roman had identified this god with their Mercury. In Latin, Arto means "bear". So Arthur like other Welsh characters, could be derived from ancient Celtic god in Gaul (France). The female form of Artaius is Artio, the bear-goddess.

The Witch who wanted to meet his higher self

By Solar Spells

There was a Witch named Rockachocka, and he wanted to meet his higher self. He had heard a rumour that a wise witch lived on a nearby mountain. So Rockachocka decided to climb the mountain and ask the wise witch for instructions on how to meet his higher self. He was about half way up the mountain when he heard a noise from above. He looked up and saw there was a genie throwing rocks down at him. Rockachocka use all his skill by running and jumping to avoid the rocks. He escaped from the genii and made it to where the wise witch lived, but when he got there he saw a sign. It said: “Ha, ha, fooled you into thinking there was a wise witch up here. Sighed The Genie. “It’s a trick,” exclaimed Rockachocka. Knowing that there was no wise witch up the mountain he climbed down again.

Next Rockachocka met a water dragon, and the water dragon told him that he could find a magician who lived on the the bottom of the ocean, and that the magician would tell him how to meet his higher self. So, Rockachocka hired some diving equipment and went to find the magician of the sea. Half way down to the bottom of the sea Rockachocka heard a loud roaring noise behind him, and turned to see the jaws of a strange sea creature that was half man and half killer whale. Rockachocka quickly dodged the jaws of the strange creature and swam into a hole in some rocks. When the creature swam away Rockachocka swam to the bottom of the sea, but when he got to where the magician was supposed to live there was a sign. The sign read: “Ha, ha, there’s one born every minute. Sighed friend of the genie of the mountains. Rockachocka had been tricked again. So he went home to think things over.

When he got home he switched on his computer and began to surf the web. After a bit of aimless surfing he saw an advertisement which said: “Witchschool. Come join us and learn the mystical and magical arts of the Witches. “That looks interesting thought Rockachocka.” Rockachocka joined the witchschool and began studying the First Degree Correllian Witchcraft course. Rockachocka even learned how to summon his higher self, using the Ritual for the Genius/Juno. As soon as he had learned the ritual he lit his candles and incense and he summoned his higher self. What Rockachocka learned from his higher self made him very happy, and he found exactly what he wanted. He is now more in union with his higher self, and this has improved his life no end.

END.

Finding the Right Path

By: JAMES MCGINNIS

A 13-week course offered in New Britain promises to make you a spiritual leader of no particular religion.

Cindy Peto found herself in several religions before finally choosing to start one of her own.

She was raised in Bristol Township as a Protestant.

Peto then married and adopted the religion of her husband, who is Catholic.

After a divorce, Peto sought inner peace with the Buddhist monks of the Mongkoltepmunee Temple in Bensalem.

Now, after graduation from a 13-week course, Peto could essentially become the leader of her own unique ministry.

She is one of 14 area residents who graduated Saturday from the Circle of Miracles' school for non-denominational spiritual leadership.

The church and school are located at 10 Beulah Road in New Britain. Graduation ceremonies were held at Bucks County Community College in Newtown Township.

The Rev. Hannelore Goodwin emigrated from Germany and founded the school in 1996. She said it appeals to "people who don't want to be told, 'You have to take a certain path.' "

The number of free spirits in America appears to be growing, according to a 2008 poll from Trinity College in Hartford, Conn.

Researchers from the university polled 54,461 Americans and found that the number with "no religious identity" had increased from 10 percent in 1990 to 20 percent in 2008.

Still, spiritual convictions nationwide appear constant. Only 2.3 percent of those polled said, "There is no such thing (as God)."

The greatest decline in religious identity appeared to be among Christians. The number of Americans who identified themselves as Christian dropped from 86 percent in 1990 to 76 percent in 2008, according to the researchers, who noted that the challenge "does not come from other religions but rather from a rejection of all forms of organized religion."

Goodwin wasn't surprised by those numbers.

"My idea is that every one of us already has the truth and wisdom within us," she said. "You can search and find something that goes click, and then you know that this is your own personal truth.

"Spirituality encourages you to grow your tentacles, your own receptors to God," Goodwin continued. She said students at her school do much more than soul searching, though.

The course list includes studies in Buddhism, Celtic tradition, Christianity, Judaism and the Kabbalah, Hinduism, Islam, metaphysics (the philosophical study of the universe as a whole), Native American rituals, non profit tax law, and pagan teachings such as Wicca.

"We study all the major religions, and the purpose or goal is to find the commonality and the founding principles," said Goodwin. "You'll find that they are very much alike. They're all originally based in love and peace and we can learn to communicate with other faiths without saying, 'I'm right and you're wrong.' "

The faculty also teaches "hatch, match and dispatch" - classes on birth rituals, weddings and funerals.

Classes are marathon sessions each weekend. Students spend three hours in class on Friday nights, 10 hours at school on Saturdays, and four hours in lectures on Sundays.

The entire semester costs $3,900, Goodwin said. The school has traditionally attracted more women than men. Only two of this year's 14 graduates are men.

Peto said she still isn't sure what to do following graduation. It's hard to think of herself as a minister.

"I will be Minister Cindy Peto. It does sound a little funny to say that. But my journey has just taken me here," she said.

"There's so many ways that I could pursue this. I could be a minister in a new church. I could be a minister in a hospital," she continued. "I'm going to help people where I can help people. I'll volunteer my time in hospitals or nursing homes or wherever I'm needed.

"Most people who know me don't even know that I did this," Peto confessed. "I didn't want to worry about what anybody thought, so I just kept it quiet. I wanted to go on this wonderful journey on my own."

The Circle of Miracles says it has trained ministers since 1999. The church also holds a weekly Sunday celebration.

The 10 a.m. service begins with this opening prayer of self-actualized, positive thinking: "I now ask the innermost center of my being to release all negativity from the week just passed, and throughout my life. I let go of angry feelings and disturbing emotions. I remove from my mind thoughts of doubt, fear and guilt."

Thorwald's Cross

Thorwald's Cross © Manx National Heritage
(Isle of Man, UK)

The transition in the Viking world of Pagan beliefs to the final embrace of Christianity is depicted on this stone. The Vikings brought pagan religion to shores already believing in Christianity and for a short time, both creeds co-existed. But eventually, Christianity won.

One side of this stone shows the Norse god Odin being devoured by Fenris the wolf at the Battle of Ragnarok - the fight against evil and the end of the world for the Norse deities. The other side is filled with Christian symbolism - a figure with a book and a cross, by a fish and a defeated serpent.

This stone is not only a 'page-turn' from pagan to Christian beliefs, it also has that rarest of things - the name of the person who was responsible. Down one side, written in ancient Norse runes, is the inscription 'Thorwald raised this cross'.

Invocation to the Moon

I come into your garden fair,
To Waltz upon the dew.
To look upon your handiwork,
While morning still is new.

I come into your meadow fair,
To laugh upon the lawn,
To stare upon a red-blue sky,
Working magic come the dawn.

I come into your forest fair,
To sing among the trees,
To sway carefree amidst the leaves
Come full the noon-day breeze.

I come into your greenwood fair,
To watch the sunlight play,
As it dances towards the dusk,
And sparkles like the fey.

I come into your grove so fair,
The cloak of night comes round,
To gather stars within its sweep
And shine upon the ground.

I come upon your world so fair,
And think on what I've seen
Then fall to sleep with Gods of old,
And dream on moon-beam wings.

THE ORDER OF WEB WEAVERS CRYSTAL WEB MAPPING PROJECT

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

For more in-depth information, including the cost of the lessons, contact me at krystelneuman@yahoo.com

May You Blessed Be
Krystel
