Runes

By Vitki Freyatrú

Do you know how to carve, do you know how to interpret,
Do you know how to stain, do you know how to test out,
Do you know how to ask, do you know how to sacrifice,
Do you know how to dispatch, do you know how to slaughter?

Sayings of the high one v144 Trans Carolyne Larrington 1996

Well, now you mention it.. Yes, I do. Now the majority of you reading this will look at the last line and a half of that stanza and say that it goes completely against the Wiccan Rede. And I would say you would most likely be right too.

The Runes are pre Wiccan, certainly if you trace Wicca back to a Gardinerian origin then this is true. And though various people have tried to claim lineage to before that time, I have not come across one which can be proved much further back than the late 18th century.

The runes do not belong to a culture where there was a concept of pure good. The runes do not accept that such a concept could have a place in the universe. The runes certainly can be used for attack, for cursing, for binding and for Killing. As I said last week , even if you intend to do good then you can end up doing harm if you don't know what you are doing.

So how come then that I have a column talking about runes here? How come I am even talking about what most people reading this would consider using dark magic? What use are they if they are that dangerous? My point is that you need to understand what you are using. The runes do not have a concept of good or evil. Even if only using them for divination and never for magic it pays to know their other uses. If you are going to use their magic for peace and light, then you better also know how to use them for dark and destruction too. I am not saying that you should all go out and start cursing with them, far from it. For a start unless you know what you are doing you are as likely to bring down the curse on yourself as you are its target. What I am saying is that you need to view runes as a tool a bit like fire. You need to know the destructive potential so that you can guard against it. Used carefully the Runes can bring warmth and light. Use them irresponsibly or without knowledge and you can find your world burning round your ears.

MORE ABOUT EOSTRE

Eostre (pron East-ra) was the Anglo-Saxon goddess of the dawn, from whom "East" (where the sun rises) and "Easter" got its name - as the fertility goddess of the Northern European peoples, her legend was manipulated by the invading Romans - newly Christianised, they merged Eostre's spring legend to coincide with the time of Christ's resurrection.

She is also goddess Ostara, the maiden, in German mythology, celebrated when night and day are equal and balanced (the spring equinox for the northern hemisphere).

Easter: What Does It Mean?

From www.theyorker.co.uk

Easter as we know it?

In the UK Christianity has come to dominate our understanding of Easter. However, Easter is historically diverse in its celebrations and origins, stemming from ancient cultures that predate Jesus and Christianity.

The celebration of Jesus' crucifixion and subsequent resurrection is the most important date in the Christian calendar. The date of Easter itself has been disputed throughout the centuries.

Pagan religions in the Mediterranean based their celebrations on a story very similar to that of Jesus and his resurrection.

Despite efforts by the First Council of Nicaea, held in 325, to establish a fixed date for the celebrations, the date of Easter alters each year according to the lunisolar calendar. Christian churches now use 21st March as the starting point for determining the date of Easter; it is then calculated as the Sunday following the next full moon.

The Anglo-Saxon goddess Eostre

The word Easter itself comes from the Old English word Eostre or Eastre which was the name of an Anglo-Saxon goddess. She was celebrated during the Spring Equinox, the time we now associate with the Easter period. To this day many Wiccans and Neopagans celebrate this time as one of their eight holy days of celebration, also known as Sabbats. Within these religions the Spring Equinox is generally a celebration of fertility, bound up in the growing of crops and the growing balance between night and day.

Pagan religions in the Mediterranean based their celebrations on a story very similar to that of Jesus and his resurrection. Attis, a figure of a mystery cult that appeared in Rome about 200 BC, was reported to have been born of a virgin impregnated by the fruits of an almond tree. He was believed to be reborn annually, and the celebrations began with a day of blood on what they called 'Black Friday' and continued over three days in which they rejoiced over his resurrection. The colour black has also been adopted in Christian celebrations as the symbol of Good Friday.

The similarity between the stories of Jesus and Attis has led to many suggestions throughout the ages. Some historians claim that Jesus' life story was simply applied to other figures, while ancient Christians argued that these stories were examples of the false deities created by Satan to predate Christ. Generally the link is now disregarded, which could explain why Jesus is more widely recognised and associated with spring celebrations.

The traditional Easter egg and Easter bunny can be traced back to antiquity as symbols of fertility. Rabbits and hares, or more specifically Lagomorphs, were symbolic particularly for their prolific breeding. The phrase 'at it like rabbits' serves to explain these ancient attitudes towards these animals.

The connection between rabbits and eggs seems to be the result of confusion about how hares raised their young.

Lagomorphs become sexually mature at a relatively young age and can give birth to several large litters per year. Females are even able to conceive whilst already pregnant making them exemplary fertility symbols in Easter folklore.

The phrase 'mad as a March hare' also explains the significance of fertility during the springtime. The saying refers to the mating rituals of hares during spring. Rejected males would often perform what appeared to be a 'mad' dance to finally win over the females. This notable behaviour meant that hares were noticed much more at this time of year.

The goddess Eostre was also associated with hares, and the egg represented the rebirth of the land during spring. Dyed eggs therefore became part of pagan rituals.

These rituals have also been assimilated into Christian celebrations of Easter. The egg is recognised by Christians as a symbol of the grave, signifying renewed and resurrected life.

Mary Magdalene

Traditionally eggs are decorated red to show the blood of Christ but some Eastern denominations follow the legend that Mary Magdalene brought cooked eggs to the tomb of Jesus to share with the other mourners which miraculously turned red when Jesus emerged from his tomb.

More simply the egg symbolises the end of Lent, a period in which eggs are traditionally forbidden. The consumption of the remaining eggs on Shrove Tuesday, or Mardi Gras, the eve of Lent, is the origin of the now largely secular 'Pancake Day'.

The connection between rabbits and eggs seems to be the result of confusion about how hares raised their young. It is thought that the hare itself was the main origin of many of these traditions and the rabbit has only been substituted recently due to its more widespread presence around the world.

It was known that hares built shelters known as forms in which to keep their young. These were often confused with the nests of lapwings, groups of wading birds who built nests which resembled the hollowed out nature of the hare's form.

Foil-wrapped and indulgent

The act of painting chickens' eggs has evolved to include the modern chocolate or plastic alternatives which now line the shops every Easter. The traditional visit of the Easter bunny and the resultant Easter egg hunt have come to function outside religious celebrations and have become practices and symbols in their own right - the J.B. Morrell Library on campus even conducted its own version last week.

With this increasingly secular recognition of once highly religious symbols the origins of Easter and its celebrations become all the more interesting.

Disturbing New Info In Covington Teen's Death

From www.local12.com

Travis White - Deceased

Disturbing new details are released today about the murder of a 17-year-old Covington boy, details that involve allegations of vampirism and witchcraft. The five adult suspects charged in connection with Travis White's murder were in a Kenton County courtroom this afternoon.

Brian Golsby and Kasey Dodson are charged with murder and tampering with evidence. Investigators say Golsby and Dodson, who play roles as vampires, used their 14-year-old lover to lure White to a home in Covington late last month.

A detective testified today about the brutal murder. Investigators say White was hit 31 times with a blunt object, stabbed 29 times, including once in the heart. Police recovered a broken bloody knife, a bloody baseball bat, a hammer and two foot long crescent wrench from the home.

David Thompson, Amber Goerler, Dale Eastman and the 14-year-old girl are charged with tampering with evidence. The 14-year-old is also charged with complicity, because investigators say she knew White was going to get beat up, but she did not know he was going to get murdered.

Religious Patients More Likely To Get Intensive Life-Prolonging Care

From cnn.com

Cancer patients who rely on religion to cope with their terminal illnesses are more likely to use intensive life-prolonging care, according to a study published this week in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Cancer patients who coped through religion were more likely to receive life-prolonging treatments.

Aggressive treatments such as machine ventilation and resuscitation keep the patients alive, but they ultimately don't cure them.

"Religious copers may decide to undergo therapies with high risks and uncertain benefits because they trust that God could heal them through the proposed treatment," the study authors wrote.

Cancer patients who had high levels of religious coping were three times more likely to receive aggressive life-prolonging care.

"We're not saying every religious copper is likely to get aggressive care," said one of the authors, Holly Prigerson, director of the Center for Psychooncology and Palliative Care Research at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. "Most of them did not. Among those who were getting the most aggressive care, it was disproportionately a function of their being a religious copper."

How cancer patients cope

A new study finds that religiousness affected end of life treatments.

Percent receiving ventilation

High in religious coping: 11.3

Low in religious coping: 3.6

Percent receiving life-prolonging care

High in religious coping: 13.6

Low in religious coping: 4.2

Percent receiving resuscitation:

High in religious coping: 7.4

Low in religious coping: 1.8

Source: Journal of the American Medical Association

About 10 percent of those who had high levels of religious coping died in the intensive care unit, as opposed to 4.2 percent who had low levels of religious coping.

In this study, nearly 80 percent of the 345 patients with advanced stages of various cancers said religion helped them cope, and about 32 percent reported that their faith was "the most important thing that keeps you going."

More than half reported praying, meditating or taking part in religious studies. The study participants were primarily Christian and were followed until death.

The Coping with Cancer study, funded by the National Cancer Institute and the National Institute of Mental Health, examined the relationship between psychological and social factors and the end-of-life outcomes at seven medical facilities in Dallas, Texas; Boston, Massachusetts; West Haven, Connecticut; and Hookset, New Hampshire.

Through adversity and near death, religion can "offer patients a sense of meaning, comfort, control and personal growth while facing life-threatening illness," wrote the 11 study authors.

"Positive religious coping gives people hope, meaning and purpose," said Dr. Harold G. Koenig, co-director of the Center for Spirituality, Theology, and Health at Duke University Medical Center, who is not involved with the study.

"It helps them to cope with the dying process. It gives them hope that something can be done, as opposed to being depressed and thinking, 'I'm going to die.' For those who are hopeful, the suffering has meaning, and they say 'I'll hold on longer,' especially African Americans and Hispanics," he said.

In other research based on the Coping With Cancer study, researchers found that the cost of Medicare in the last six months of life varied by race: The average cost for whites was $20,166, compared with $26,704 for black people and $31,702 for Hispanics.

Don't Miss

- 2.. Brave a shave to fight childhood cancer
- 3.. Where's the cure for cancer?

At the end of their lives, "minorities often receive more expensive but not necessarily life-enhancing care," according to the study published in the March 9 issue of Archives of Internal Medicine.

Researchers found that one-third of the Medicare budget goes to the medical treatments given in the last year of life and that 80 percent of those costs were for ventilators and intensive care.

Blacks and Hispanics were more likely to use religious coping, according to the study. Even after the analysis was adjusted for factors such as age and race/ethnicity, religious coping was associated with receiving aggressive medical care.

Cancer patients who relied heavily on religious coping were less likely to understand a do-not-resuscitate order and felt that such an order was morally wrong. These patients were less likely to have advanced planning such as having a living will (29 percent, versus 68 percent who were less religious) or medical power of attorney, which is the ability to act on someone else's behalf (34 percent, versus 64 percent who relied less on religion).

Study authors wrote that doctors should be attentive to religion as they discuss prognosis and treatment with terminally ill patients.

"Physicians are hearing and are honoring patients' wishes for more intensive care, even if they might not believe it," Prigerson said. "What it highlights for clinicians is that they should have a better sense of how much religious beliefs are being factored into the decision-making process."

For many physicians, it's a complicated and often uncomfortable line between faith and science.

"When you have no communication about a factor that's influencing decisions, this is going to happen," Koenig said. "People hang on for dear life and don't feel their beliefs are respected when we don't talk about them."

Koenig, who is also a professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences, recommended that doctors talk to patients about their "spiritual history" but said research showed that less than 10 percent do.

More than half of Americans believe faith trumps science. In a study published last year, 57 percent of randomly surveyed adults said divine intervention could save a deathly ill family member even if physicians said treatment would be futile.

"There's a paradox," said Prigerson. "Patients trust their doctors but they may not be trusting of information about their prognosis shared by their doctors. They may not think it's relevant and that when or how they die will be determined by God, not by medicine."

Till next time, brightest and warmest blessings, and, of course, happy Ostara!

You Call It Easter; We Call It Ostara - Part 3

Author: Peg Aloï

http://www.witchvox.com/va/dt_va.html?a=usma&c=holidays&id=1991

To refer again to The Wicker Man, the post office/candy shop where May Morrison works (she is the mother of Rowan Morrison, the young girl who is supposedly missing and who Sargent Howie has come to Summerisle to find) offers a large selection of candies shaped like animals. When Sargent Howie says "I like your rabbits" Mrs. Morrison scolds him saying "Those are hares! Lovely March hares, not silly old rabbits!" And when Howie goes to dig up the grave of Rowan Morrison (who it turns out is neither dead nor missing) he finds the carcass of a hare, and Lord Summerisle tries to convince him that Rowan was transformed into a hare upon her death. Clearly this is an illustration of the powerful association with animals that many ancient cultures have (Summerisle being a place where time has seemingly stood still and where the pagan pursuit of pleasure and simple agricultural ways define the way of life). The forming of candy into the shape of rabbits or chicks is a way to acknowledge them as symbols; by eating them, we take on their characteristics, and enhance our own fertility, growth and vitality.

For clearly the association of rabbits with Easter has something to do with fertility magic. Anyone who has kept rabbits as pets or knows anything about their biology has no question about the origin of the phrase "f like a bunny." These cute furry creatures reproduce rapidly, and often! Same with chicks, who emerge wobbly and slimy from their eggs only to become fluffy, yellow and cute within a few hours. The Easter Bunny may well have its origin in the honoring of rabbits in spring as an animal sacred to the goddess Eastre, much as horses are sacred to the Celtic Epona, and the crow is sacred to the Morrigan. As a goddess of spring, she presides over the realm of the conception and birth of babies, both animal and human, and of the pollination, flowering and ripening of fruits in the plant kingdom. Sexual activity is the root of all of life: to honor this activity is to honor our most direct connection to nature.

At Beltane (April 31st-May 1st), pagans and Witches honor the sexual union of the god and goddess amid the flowers and fruits that have begun to cover the land; but prior to that, at Ostara, we welcome the return of the spring goddess from her long season of dormant sleep. The sap begins to flow, the trees are budding, the ground softens, ice melts, and everywhere the fragrance and color of spring slowly awakens and rejuvenates our own life force.

I have always thought this had a lot to do with the tradition of wearing newly-bought or made clothes at Easter, in pastel spring colors. Wearing such colors we echo the flowering plants, crocus, lilac, forsythia, bluebells, violets and new clothes allow us to feel we are renewing our persona. How many of us feel sort of "blah" after winter ends? Along with the fasting practice mentioned earlier, this is a time for many of us to create new beginnings in our lives: this can apply to jobs, relationships, living situations, lifestyle choices. But since the Equinox is such a potent time magically, and often (as it does this year) falls in the period when Mercury is Retrograde, starting a new endeavor at this time can be problematic if we do not take care. One good way to avoid catastrophe is to engage in small, personally-oriented rites or activities: a new haircut, a new clothing style or make-up, a new exercise program, the grand old tradition of spring cleaning, a new course of study: all of these are relatively "safe" ways to begin anew without risking the weirdness and unpredictability of Mercury Retrograde.

This is a very powerful time to do magic, not only because of the balancing of the earth's energies, but because of the way our own beings echo the earth's changes. We are literally reborn as we emerge from our winter sleep, ready to partake of all the pleasures of the earth, and to meet the challenges we will face as the world changes around us daily. As we greet and celebrate with our pagans brothers and sisters of the Southern Hemisphere (for whom the Vernal Equinox more closely resembles the beginning of autumn, in physical terms!), we remember that Spring is not only a season; it is a state of mind.

Blessed Be in the Season of Spring! Go Forth and Flower!

Poets Retreat

Spider- Weaver of Creativity and Fate

Master weaver of our fates,
Symbol of the figure eight,
Time for us to create, create, create.

From the first primordial alphabet,
You're showing us our plan is set.
It's time for us to create the span,
All of us have an eternal plan.

Grandmother spider,
Teach us the mysteries of our past,
So that we will know,
What to do at last.
Show us how to change our lots in life,
For it has always been up to us.

While resenting others that are doing well,
We're putting ourselves through utter hell.
We're breaking up the flow of ebb,
By getting tangled in our own web.

In feeding our egos
We've lost the game,
Time to rid ourselves,
From all this disdain.

Oh, symbol of infinity,
Spinning your web so creatively,
Teaching us to maintain balance,
Between the past and the future,
Between the physical and the spiritual,
Between the male and the female.

In weaving a deeper relationship,
Let us love our mates
As we love ourselves,
Weaving a deeper bonding,
Between the male and the female.

We are the writers of
Our own destiny,
Our own creativity,
Our own polarity
And balance.

In doing so, we set the stage for the future,
Meaning: Who we are, is Who we were!

Rev. Andi's Kidz Korner

Especially designed for the children growing up around the Correllian lifestyle!

Merry Meet little hatchlings! Welcome once again to a full to the brim edition of Kidz Korner!

With Ostara in a couple of days - and with the weekend looming - this should be just the greatest time to read through this and have lots to try out over the weekend. Lots of great stories to tell your friends on Monday too!

So without delay. . . Here's more Kidz Korner!
Enjoy!

Thoughts And Ideas / Crafts:

Make An Ostara Tree

Ostara is a marker of the coming of spring. New life is all around us, showing in the green shoots on the trees, sprigs of grass appearing from the mud, and even -- if we're lucky -- a few flowers poking up. It's a time of chicks and eggs, newborn lambs and calves, and the days are getting a bit longer and a bit warmer. We can smell the freshness of the earth when we're outside. A fun project to do at Ostara is make and decorate a tree for the Sabbat. It doesn't have to be huge or fancy, but it's nice to have one sitting indoors to remind you of the changing seasons.

You Will Need:

- 4.. Several lightweight branches
- 5.. Some florist's foam
- 6.. A flowerpot
- 7.. Acrylic paints
- 8.. Spanish moss
- 9.. Small spring decorations

First, paint the pot with spring designs -- flowers, butterflies, ladybugs, eggs, etc. If you have kids, this is a lot of fun. If you don't mind them getting a bit messy, let them use thumbprints to make designs. Allow the paint to dry.

Cut a chunk of florist's foam to fit into the pot and then insert the branches into the foam so that it forms a tree shape. Hang the decorations -- eggs, ribbons, flowers, etc. -- on the branches. Use salt dough and cookie cutters to make ornaments to hang, if you like. Use the Spanish moss to cover the florist's foam in the top of the pot. Place your tree on your altar during ritual, or use it as a tabletop decoration.

Note: Try to use branches that have already fallen on the ground, rather than taking them from a live tree. If you must cut from a living tree or bush, make sure you do so in a way that will allow for new growth on the plant. If you have forsythia bushes, they may be blooming right now - their branches are perfect for this project!

Ideas For The Kitchen:

Ostara Pasta With Goat Cheese

Really, really delicious this one!!

16 ounces penne pasta
1 cup rich milk
2 eggs, well beaten
12 ounces feta cheese, crumbled
¼ cup sun-dried tomatoes, chopped
¼ tsp pepper
¼ tsp basil (use 1 tbsp to 1 ¼ tbsp, if fresh)
¼ tsp parsley flakes (use 1 tbsp to 1 ¼ tbsp, if fresh)
1 cup mushrooms, chopped, any variety (optional)
½ cup black olives, chopped (optional)
½ cup bread crumbs (optional)

Grease a 9" x 13" baking pan and preheat oven to 350° Fahrenheit / 180° Celsius / Gas Mark 4.

Cook the pasta until just al dente, drain well.

Mix the milk & eggs together; set aside. In another bowl, mix the feta, tomatoes, pepper, basil, parsley, mushrooms and olives. Add drained pasta and blend well. Pour into the baking pan.

Top with bread crumbs, if you desire, then pour the milk/egg mixture over the top, distributing evenly, allowing it to soak down into the pasta.

Bake for 30 - 45 minutes, or until top turns golden.

THE ORDER OF WEB WEAVERS CRYSTAL WEB MAPPING PROJECT

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

For more in-depth information, including the cost of the lessons, contact me at krystelneuman@yahoo.com

May You Blessed Be
Krystel
