Badgers

Advice from the RSPCA

<http://www.rspca.org.uk/servlet/Satellite?pagename=RSPCA/RSPCARedirect&pg=wildlifeadvice&marker=1&articleId=1024473693863>

Badgers usually live in woodland but you may find them in your garden as they move between setts or look for food. Some even set up home in a secluded areas of gardens, or on golf courses.

Badgers are active at dawn and dusk, but cubs may be seen foraging during daylight if food is scarce in the summer. They live in social groups of five to 12 and each group usually has one litter of between one and five cubs each year.

A national survey of badgers in 1997 estimated there were 50,000 social badger groups in Britain - that's around 310,000 adult badgers.

Feeding badgers

Providing supplementary food, in limited amounts, can be beneficial to badgers. Tinned cereal-based dog food with lightly-cooked meat, cheese, peanuts and fruit can help badger cubs survive hot dry summers and also help all badgers during cold, frosty periods.

But not everyone welcomes badgers and, if food is provided on a regular basis by a number of households, there is a risk that badgers may become a problem for some neighbours. This could lead to someone taking action against the animals.

Keep out!

The most humane and long-term solution to discourage badgers from your garden is to remove or prevent access to whatever attracts them to the area.

Food is the number one attraction; only provide food for wild birds on bird tables or in feeders and clear away windfall fruit. Make sure your dustbin is securely sealed with an expanding strap.

To stop badgers getting in to your vegetable patch, use electrified flexinet fencing (pegged down along its length to prevent badgers squeezing underneath) or two strands of electrified Polywire at 7.5-20cm above ground.

Digging in

Badgers may dig up lawns for insect larvae, or for a latrine to mark their territories, although this behaviour is largely seasonal. Latrines are most conspicuous in the spring and autumn, with lawn digging in late autumn and early spring. As damage is limited to certain times of the year, many gardeners find it easier to tolerate the nuisance.

Proper protection

The Protection of Badgers Act 1992 makes it an offence to kill or injure a badger (except under licence); cruelly ill-treat a badger; use certain prohibited firearms; dig for a badger; damage or destroy a badger sett or obstruct access to it, or disturb a badger in it; cause a dog to enter a badger sett; and tag or mark any badger (except under licence).

An occupied badger sett may also be found on the proposed site for a road or housing. To avoid later problems, developers should carry out surveys with the local badger group, wildlife trust or ecological consultant before seeking outline planning permission. Providing tunnels under roads, artificial setts, roadside reflectors, badger gates and fencing can help reduce the impact on the local badger population.

Astrology

Rev. Leona

This week we move onto the sixth house. This is the house of your health and your service to others.

The Sixth house is the cornerstone to your health and well being. This is where you will examine your physical health and all of the choices you make to keep a healthy lifestyle. The Sixth House asks: Are you a healthy person? Do you get sick easily and often? When you get sick there is something in your life that is out of balance. When you suffer from health troubles you will need to stop and reflect upon the imbalances that may be appearing in your life. Working with the Sixth House you identify the patterns of illness. Do they tend to be connected to certain times, places, events in your life? Do you tend to get sick on Mondays or Fridays? Do you get sick in the summer? Do you have allergies? Do you begin to feel ill when you have to go some place or do something you do not want to? What types of childhood illnesses did you suffer from? Understanding your patterns of illness will allow you to overcome these patterns and rid yourself of illness.

By taking the initiative to stop and examine the types of illnesses you suffer from you will begin to detect your own physical weaknesses. The Sixth House will offer you a chance to examine your physical constitution. When dealing with this area you will have to examine your lifestyle as well as your genealogy. This is the house where your family's medical history will play a crucial role in your present and future well being. Are there a lot of early deaths in your family? Are there any genetic problems which run in your family? Has heart disease or cancer affected anyone in your family? Can you see generational patterns of disease being passed down? These are questions that many do not wish to face. Looking at a family history that is filled with health related issues can be quite upsetting. The Sixth House challenges you to examine these factors and through this process you will be able to identify the categories in which you are running a higher risk. This house works to bring these issues to the forefront of your life so that you have the chance to counteract any negative genetic traits that you have. The Sixth House will show you the importance of early detection and education. Understanding your own health background will allow you to compensate for any of the deficiencies that you have found.

Not all of the health problems you encounter while working with the Sixth house will be genetically discovered. Genetics will account for some of the health problems you will face but not all of them. When you examine your health patterns you will also have to look at the choices you make. For this reason the Sixth house will shed light upon your lifestyle as well as your eating habits. Looking at your own habits you will be able to see which choices you make will help or hinder your overall health. Do you consider a coffee and a chocolate bar to be a healthy meal? Do you walk or take your car to the corner store? Do you jump into any new fad diet that comes without researching the side effects? Do you take medications without really knowing why, or the side effects they may have? Do you take the time to care for yourself to make sure you are rested and always in peak shape? Your lifestyle choices will impact many areas of your life. When you look at the way your physical systems interact it is not difficult to see that if you wear yourself down and do not take in enough vitamins and nutrients that you will become tired and eventually illness will appear.

The Sixth House wants you to find the key to your health and well being. To do this you will have to open up many different areas of your life. When you work with this house you will have to look at what you eat and drink as well as what you do. The Sixth House asks you: Do you lead a stressful or peaceful lifestyle? Do you have a healthy way of dealing with stress? Do you express your feelings or do you allow them to become bottled up inside?

When working with the Sixth House you develop your own coping skills. How you deal with stress and adversity can help to identify many of your patterns of illness. Do you have the right skills to work through any difficult periods? How do you deal with stress? Do you take problems in stride or do you crack? Learning positive coping skills will help you to infuse your life with positive energy. This new energy will place you into a stronger position from which you can face the world.

Along with stress the Sixth House deals with crisis. Everyone must face different crises in their life and each crisis that is overcome will teach you a new skill. The Sixth House will examine the way you are dealing with crisis. How you deal with stress and conflict in your own life will show you how you cope with these issues on a grander scale.

Understanding your reactions and developing healthy skills will allow you to work through the issues of the Sixth House with a positive attitude. When examining your reactions to stress and crisis you will have to face all of the decisions you have made or turned from. The Sixth House tries to create the connections to give you deeper understanding of how your life decisions have affected your health. The Sixth House will show you that when you face a crisis and deal with these crises before moving on, then you will have developed a useful skill. This new skill will then help you to create a stronger constitution. However, if you face a crisis with worry you will wear yourself out. This will then weaken your constitution.

The Sixth House wants you to stop and contemplate all of the hard work you have done and all of the hard work you have yet to do. The Sixth House tells you that you must knuckle down and get to work. This house tells you that now you must create a list of your responsibilities. The Sixth House asks you: Have you been living up to your duties? Do you complain and try to avoid your work? Do you delegate your duties so that you have more time to yourself? Who makes you accountable for your duties? Responsibility is something that is not to be taken lightly. When you agree to take on tasks you are then expected to fulfill these tasks and not let them slip. You will find that now others are relying on you to fulfill your obligations. Do you tend to take on too many tasks and then complete all of them shabbily?

The Sixth House will examine the amount of energy you exude each day. The key to this challenge is to understand how much energy you place into your daily routines and travel. How long does it take you to get ready? How long to get to work? Do you always wear/do the same things? Working with the Sixth House will give you a chance to work on your everyday routines and show you how you can improve them. You will find which habits are no longer useful and which patterns need to be addressed and altered. By eradicating different patterns from your life you will free up much needed energy that you will then be able to harness and direct towards other activities.

The Sixth House wants to help you to find your own place in society. Learning where you fit in is one of the most difficult tasks that you will ever have to complete. Some people spend their entire life trying to find their place. Finding your place in society is an important part of the Sixth House. As such this house will ask you to take the time to see where you fit into the big picture. When working with the Sixth House you will need to stretch your imagination so that it may reach out and beyond your little world. You are part of the great mechanism of life. You need to make sure that you are fully aware of your contribution and that you are tuned up and ready to contribute. Should you neglect your duties there will be a great number of blockages that will occur and you will soon find your progress halting.

Finding your place in society requires you to stop and look around. This is not an easy task. The journey to this discovery will be filled with much disappointment. To help in this quest the Sixth House asks you: Are you doing everything that you can? Do you complete everything that you are asked to do? What talents and skills do you have that you can offer to the world? Do you take time to volunteer with different groups and organizations so that you can find your place? The Sixth House will show you where you fit in. You are the one who must work to understand this role. Once understanding has sunk in you will be able to move into your role. Looking at the places where you fit in and where you are able to contribute will allow you to harmonize with your environment. This harmonization allows you to become responsible for your place in society and as such will fill you with a great feeling of satisfaction.

The Sixth House reminds you that even though you have a responsibility to your world and to your work that you are also responsible for yourself. Working with this house you will be given the opportunity to develop yourself. Working on yourself gives you a chance to develop your strengths and weaknesses. That is why this stage of the Sixth House will allow you to become a fully-realized creature. You will find ways to improve your health and your work habits. You will find your own place and you will be able to participate in a more constructive manner. The Sixth House will show you how to change your idle time to productive and fulfilling. When you work in harmony with this house you will develop into a healthy and considerate human being.

V Is For Voracious: Vampire Culture Unveiled

From www.tampabay.com

Veronica Selier, 34, the girlfriend of Tampa vampire leader Evan Christopher, puts in costume contact lenses during a lengthy transformation to her Victorian-Goth evening look in preparation for a Vampire Gathering. She completes the look with "big, long acrylic fangs." Many vampires want your energy, not your blood, and yes, they have a code of ethics.

THE VAMPIRES wait outside the back door of the Ybor City nightclub. Newcomers stand on the fringes, alone. The regulars talk about school, about work, about the weather. But not about blood-drinking. Not out here.

Up walks a man in a cashmere trench coat. Evan Christopher, 39, is the group's founder. They gravitate toward him.

"It's a great night to be Victorian," he says, revealing fangs. His eyes, shielded in ice blue contact lenses, are two black dots.

After dispensing hugs and kisses, he stands at the entrance and scans the group. He spots two women in jeans and leans to his right.

"They're not with us," Evan tells a stocky, serious vampire who serves as one of the group's "gargoyles."

Anyone who wants to get into a Vampire Gathering needs to see the gargoyles first. They're the protectors, the first line of defense against heckling street preachers and tourists.

The women move along, but I remain, the first reporter ever allowed past the gargoyles, the first permitted to give you — my fellow "mundanes" — a glimpse into their vampire world.

Sharks Teeth From The 1100's Found In North Iceland

From www.icelandreview.com

From Skagafjörður. View of Drangey Island.

Shark teeth from the 12th century were recently discovered as part of an archeological excavation project at Kolkuós in Skagafjörður, north Iceland. The teeth are probably the oldest that have been excavated in Iceland.

The shark teeth are another clue of a diverse industry in the area, according to archeologist Ragnheidur Traustadóttir, who leads the project. Kolkuós was the main harbor in Skagafjörður in ancient times and a center for international trade, Morgunbladid reports.

“The teeth indicate [shark] processing at Kolkuós at that time. The oil from the liver was good for lighting and the shark meat was eaten. There was a lot of shark in Skagafjörður and early in the 20th century people only had to row for a half an hour to find good shark waters,” said Traustadóttir.

This is the seventh summer in a row that excavation takes place at Kolkuós in relation to the archeological research at Hólar, an ancient bishopric.

Traustadóttir believes that the harbor at Kolkuós was most definitely the deciding factor when Hólar was chosen for a bishopric in 1106. The harbor was damaged in the 16th century and the power of the bishops at Hólar may possibly have decreased as a consequence.

In addition to shark processing, indications of iron and coal production have been found at Kolkuós, carving and carpentry was likely practiced there, along with fishing and bird hunting.

Furthermore, indications of the import of various products and material have been found, such as flint, sharpeners, baking trays from Norway, clay vessels, knives, nails and other tools.

Bones from domestic animals have been found, including some from small dogs, which Traustadóttir says were a status symbol in the Middle Ages. A pagan grave, silver coins from southern Germany and England and a medieval anchor are also among discoveries.

Traustadóttir stated that invaluable cultural and historical objects would have been lost had the Kolkuós archeological excavation project not been undertaken. Now the future of the project depends on state-funding.

Key Witness Recants Story of Satanic Rituals

From www.todaysthv.com/news

Vicki Hutcheson was in court Friday at a hearing to determine if Jesse Misskelley and Jason Baldwin will get a new trial, but did not take the stand because the statute of limitations has not run out on perjury for her previous testimony.

She originally testified in Jesse Misskelley's trial in 1994 that she saw Damien Echols and Misskelley participating in satanic rituals. But the defense Friday submitted a 2004 transcript of her recanting it all under oath.

She says West Memphis Police threatened her if she didn't testify against Misskelley and that they put her up in a hotel immediately after his trial, so she wouldn't be available for the Echols and Baldwin trial.

Also Friday, an acquaintance of Misskelley, Echols, and Baldwin, took the stand. She testified that the night of the murders, she talked to Echols on the phone between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. and he was at his home.

The defense today, also introduced an affidavit from Jason Baldwin's uncle stating that Jason was at his house mowing the lawn from 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. the night of the murders.

None of that testimony was heard during the original trial.

The defense wrapped up Friday, but the prosecution didn't have its witnesses ready, so the judge continued the hearing to October first and second. He says he wants it all wrapped up then.

Taking The Inner Road

Spiritual Trips Are A Hot Trend (And One Of The Oldest Reasons To Travel)

From <http://www.canada.com>

Transforming. That's how Carol Levine describes her recent trip to Teotihuacan, a sacred Aztec site near Mexico City.

"It was a fantastic experience," says Levine, an organizational consultant based in Minneapolis, Minnesota. "I was looking for a special trip to help mark my 41st birthday and ended up having a life-altering experience." She says that since returning from Mexico in February, her life is more peaceful, more grounded.

Tara Alain agrees. "I had what you might call a 'peak' experience," says the Squamish, B.C., resident. "I was so changed by what happened on my trip to Peru that I quit my job and practise daily meditation."

Levine and Alain are among a growing number of travellers seeking more from time away than a comfortable bed, a good meal and the chance to have their picture taken next to well-known monuments while stocking up on local souvenirs.

One of today's hottest travel trends is actually one of the oldest. Spiritual curiosity and passion for transformation are among the human race's oldest motivators to travel. In some cultures, this type of journey is a rite of passage, as in the native American vision quest or the Australian Aborigine walkabout. Since the beginning of time, people have also visited sacred sites for healing, inspiration and guidance.

"There's no doubt that there is a trend for people looking for a deeper meaning to their travel experience," says Helen Tomei, president of Sacred Earth Journeys, a Vancouver-based company that specializes in travel to a wide range of sacred sites. Both Levine and Alain took trips organized through her company.

"People are looking for an inner journey as much as an outer journey," Tomei says.

In Ontario, Beth Mairs, owner of Wild Women Expeditions based near Sudbury, says she noticed a shift from adventure trekking to more spiritual, reflective retreats a couple of years ago.

"The interest in the spiritual is immense," says Mairs. "In the late '90s, we were cancelling half the retreats we planned, because of lack of interest, while paddling and trekking were going gangbusters. Then, in the spring of 2005, I noticed that, in terms of Google word searches, all of a sudden 'women's retreats' were being asked for just as often as 'women's travel.' I was surprised and we revamped what we were offering. By 2006, retreats surpassed paddling and hiking trips combined."

Feline Fun

Rev. Nehal

This week in Feline Fun – Hey Spiderman, have you lost a pet cat by any chance??

AMAZING climbing cat Charlie scales up a TWO-STOREY building to get into his home.

The tomcat has stunned locals as he fearlessly clambers up the side of his house. His gravity-defying antics have earned him the nickname "Spider-cat".

The seven-year-old has now become something of a local celebrity among neighbours in Denny, near Falkirk.

Owner Hannah Smith said today: "Charlie meows at the front door to be let out. So we let him out but no sooner is he let out than he wants back in.

"But if no one hears him at the front door, he then wanders round to the back of the buildings to find the balcony.

"He then climbs up the balcony to get in. So Charlie really goes out the front door and in the back door."

Ms Smith added: "I got him as a wee kitten and out of the litter Charlie was the one that looked most mischievous and I liked that about him. He's certainly lived up to his reputation.

"I think it is totally incredible how Charlie is able to climb up a roughcast wall. I've seen cats climb trees but I've never seen a cat climb a wall. It's amazing."

Earth News

Blue tits use medicinal plants to disinfect their nests, scientists have discovered.

The birds line their nests with aromatic plants such as mint or lavender, which kill bacteria. That creates a more sterile environment for chicks, which in turn grow faster and have a better chance of survival.

However, individual blue tits are quite picky about which plants they use, and it is not clear how they pass their knowledge on to other birds.

A number of European bird species add aromatic plants to their nests. Starlings, for instance, usually bring back aromatic plants as part of a courtship display designed to attract females. But they stop doing so as soon as a female lays her eggs, suggesting the plants are for display only.

On Corsica, blue tits (Cyanistes caeruleus) also incorporate fresh fragments of aromatic plants including lavender, mint and curry plants into their nests.

"We hypothesised that aromatic plants used by blue tits had some anti-parasite properties, because most of these plants, or close species of the same genus, are traditional Mediterranean plants with well-known medicinal properties," says Adele Mennerat, a biologist now at the University of Bergen in Norway.

Lavender and achillea leaves line this egg-filled nest

Germ killer

Mennerat and colleagues from France's National Centre of Scientific Research, based in Montpellier, and the University of Toulouse initially tested whether these plants deterred blow fly larvae that commonly live in tit nests and feed on chicks' blood, significantly damaging their health.

"Despite repeated attempts we could never find any effect of these plants on blow fly infestation," Mennerat says.

"So we tested the effects of these plants on the bacteria living on birds."

The researchers describe their results in the journal Oecologia.

They found that aromatic plants, including lavender (Lavandula stoechas), apple mint (Mentha suaveolens), the curry plant (Helichrysum italicum) and Achillea ligustica significantly change the composition of bacterial communities living on blue tit nestlings.

A clean, fragrant bed

"They reduce the number of different bacterial species, and the total number of bacteria, especially on chicks that are most vulnerable because they are both highly infested by blow fly larvae and carry great amounts of bacteria on their skin," says Mennerat.

It is unclear exactly how volatile compounds produced by the aromatic plants kill the bacteria.

But blue tit chicks living in nests adorned with aromatic plants grew faster and had a higher proportion of red blood cells, which is known to be a strong indicator of a chick's future chances of survival after fledging.

Mennerat cannot yet be sure but she suspects that living in a disinfected nest enables the chicks to allocate less energy to their immune systems and more to growing physically. Much remains to be explained, however.

No other bird has yet been shown to use aromatherapy in the same way, while related species such as the great tit or coal tit do not even decorate their nests with such plants. So it is unclear how the behaviour originated in blue tits.

Different birds also prefer different aromatics, regardless of their local availability, the researchers found.

"One of the most unexpected findings we got was that female blue tits display individual preferences in their use of aromatic plant species," says Mennerat.

Lavender is an effective antimicrobial

"For example, in a territory with big bushes of lavender, for some reason blue tits at this site still collect mint that can only be found far away from their nests. We still don't know why and how blue tits have such individual preferences."

The researchers are also keen to discover how these personal aromatic preferences are passed on between birds.

THE ORDER OF WEB WEAVERS CRYSTAL WEB MAPPING PROJECT

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

For more in-depth information, including the cost of the lessons, contact me at krystelneuman@yahoo.com

May You Blessed Be
Krystel
