The Pagan Census - Revisited

Ed Hubbard

Twenty years ago, a great project sought for Pagans to declare themselves and be counted. This is something Don, Brendan, Traci, Janet and I participated in, and we handed out the census all over Chicago. It was important.

Now 20 years later they are doing a new Pagan Census in order to compare our numbers and growth. I think this is a vitally important survey, and one that will give us a fair image.

Ten Years ago, Witch School Began and changed the community, the older Data is publicly available, and this is a great moment to answer these 81 questions. Ask everyone to take it. It's important and it appears to be anonymous.

I participate, and I have taken both Censuses now. I think we have had an impact, and now we can join the Pagan community in exploring the question how many people are Pagan?

This is an international survey please take the time to fill it in wherever you live!!

Pagan Census

We are conducting an international survey of contemporary Pagans. If you are a Pagan we would appreciate your taking the time to complete this survey.

This survey builds on an earlier one completed over twenty years ago, primarily in the United States, which was conducted by Helen A. Berger and Andras Arthen (of the EarthSpirit Community) entitled the Pagan Census. At the time it was hoped that we could do a census of the entire Pagan population. Although that was not possible the data that was collected was the largest of its type and served as the basis of a book, Voices from the Pagan Census by Helen A. Berger (with Evan Leach and Leigh S. Shaffer). The survey data is now available on line at Murray Research Archive at Harvard University.

A number of scholars have noted that it would be helpful to have a follow-up of that survey to see if and how the community has changed or remained the same. The survey that follows uses many, although not all of the same questions that were in the original survey to provide that comparison. There are also new questions, for instance about the Internet, something that was of little interest 20 years ago but is now, and some from other studies, that again permit a comparison. This has resulted in the survey being somewhat long--we appreciate your taking the time to complete it.

We realize that the categories found in questionnaires like this one frequently do not do justice to the complexities of real life. For this reason, a number of open-ended items have been included that allow for more nuanced responses. You are also welcome to contact Helen A. Berger directly at HBerger@wcupa.edu

Please inform other Pagans about this research project and feel free to pass it along via e-mail or to post a link on appropriate blogs or websites.

Thanks for your help.

Faith & Belief

Rev. Dr. Sherri M. Barclift

How often have you asked for assistance, signs, insight, clarity...only to feel confused when the outcome is contrary to what we received? This happens to all of us – lately I have been asking for signs, confirmation, from my angels and guides to remind me that the messages I am getting are true and accurate – yet the outcome appears to be the same. This can cause some doubt, but one thing I have been learning is faith – keeping faith in the process.

This may not be as easy as it sounds when from different angles it can seem as if the world that is around you is not the easiest place to be. Financial crises, relationship changes, job loss or insecurity, health issues or any varied range of personal challenges that seem to take their emotional and mental toll on you in the now moment.

Due to the many changes I have gone through – and still am going through – I feel a different level of peace by being in a state of faith that all things are taken care of, even if I cannot see the outcome at the moment. It's a matter of removing myself from the end result – the how, when and why and believing, fully knowing, that the outcome will be for my highest good.

This is not always easy and I can't say I live in a state of total bliss, non-stress and non-worry, but when the feelings that are heavy, worrisome and fearsome do come in, I ask my angels to remind me that everything is working out for the best. Sometimes I will ask for a sign – for me feathers have always been a symbolic message on my path – so I may ask for a feather, a gesture from the angels, to assure me when I feel like I am losing my certainty because all around me is going against what I am seeking. Then out of nowhere, a feather will present itself. I am reminded, I am not alone, I am guided, I am protected.

If you find you are going through a stage in your life where you feel stressed, strained or simply lost on the path, ask for a sign from your guides or angels – ask for something, anything, that you can see so that you can attain the physical image you need to show you that you are being led and you aren't out there wandering alone, lost and confused.

Many people see numbers that are symbolic or animals may cross their path that stores a message that is an important reminder – for others its “pennies from heaven” along their path – whatever the symbol, acknowledge it and remember you are being given this sign to remind you of your faith.

These little signs from the angels, our guides or Creator are presented to us to remind us of the infinite love and light that is there, leading, guiding, and assisting us on the journey. We are never in darkness even if there are times when the light does not seem to be on, it is only because we are looking elsewhere and have changed our area of focus.

Kooky, sexy, cool – the rise of the new witches

By Eimear O'Hagan, 06/09/2009

Forget Kabbalah – paganism is the hot new religion, and thousands of young British women are embracing it.

Witches, covens, dancing around bonfires by the light of the moon and making offerings to goddesses - all the stuff of folklore and fairy tale, right? Wrong.

Welcome to the world of paganism. Walk into any high-street bookshop and, alongside the usual chick-lit best-sellers, there's another set of books flying off the shelves, all about how to find your inner witch. Yes, really.

Hot on the heels of best-selling vampire saga Twilight and new US drama Eastwick, it seems all things weird are wonderful.

Pagan culture has arrived in the 21st century - and young women are behind its growing popularity. Intrigued by its mystery and underlying sexuality, 20-somethings are converting in their droves, making paganism the UK's fastest growing religion.

According to the Office of National Statistics, there were 31,000 pagans living in the UK in 2001. Just eight years later, the Pagan Federation estimates there are now around 360,000.

'THE MORE I LEARNT, THE MORE IT MADE SENSE'

Mum-of-four Amie Roberts converted to paganism three years ago.

"I'd always been interested in nature, and liked reading about tarot cards and collecting herbs for healing," says Amie, 31. "I learnt more about paganism though my partner, Simon. We met in 2002 and he'd been raised a pagan. It fascinated me."

Far from being a niche belief, there are pagans in all walks of life. There's even a Pagan Police Association in the UK - in July, it was reported that they'll be able to take leave to celebrate pagan festivals like the summer solstice and Halloween.

It's a far cry from the 17th century, when suspected witches were burned at the stake or drowned. So what's brought paganism out of the broom closet and into the mainstream?

Bristol University's Professor Ronald Hutton, a leading authority on paganism, says it's partly due to the feminist movement.

"As women become more empowered in their relationships and careers, they've begun to look for a set of beliefs that reflects this," he says. "In paganism, women are given an equal role to men - and in some branches, they're actually dominant. Women want a religion that empowers them."

Amie, who took the pagan name Amia Wolf when she became a witch in 2006, uses chants and spells to enrich her everyday life. Standing in a circle of stones in her moonlit garden, Amie begins chanting, calling on the powers of nature to protect her and her family.

"I don't belong to a coven, I'm a solo witch, so I practise rituals alone," she says. "I'll mark out a sacred circle in my garden, or in the living room if the weather's bad.

It's a protective space - dark influences can't harm you when you're inside it."

Bonkers? Perhaps. But Amie says it's changed her life for the better. "I've never been happier. When I converted to paganism, I felt like I'd come home."

Professor Hutton also believes women are attracted to the fact that paganism can be practised anywhere and at any time, making it easier to fit around busy modern lives.

He says: "Rather than going to church at a certain time every week, and following a set of rules handed to you, pagans can walk their own path in life and not be restricted by laws and traditions. You can adapt paganism to suit your life, which is appealing."

'I RECEIVED DEATH THREATS FOR MY BELIEFS'

But not everyone embraces this new age of paganism. Amie and Simon, 28, had to move from their home after receiving death threats.

"We lived in a small Welsh village and once people realised I was a pagan, the rumours started. People said I was dancing naked in the garden and having sex with animals - it was ridiculous," she says.

"Strangers would shout 'witch' at me in the street when I was out walking with my kids. One man even threatened to kill me."

When her son was picked on because of Amie's religion, the family decided to move.

"We couldn't stay there - we'd been so ostracised," she explains. "Now we live near Glastonbury, which is pagan heaven."

Amie says their shared beliefs add another dimension to her and Simon's relationship that other couples could benefit from.

"When we can get a babysitter, rather than go out for a meal or to the cinema, we go to a forest or a beach - where the elements of earth or water are present - and create a sacred circle," she explains. "We talk about spiritual matters and also personal problems. We do readings from witch's cards for one another. It's very intimate and relaxing, and wonderful to escape together for a few hours."

Professor Hutton also believes paganism's popularity is partly due to our current obsession with the environment.

"People are attracted to the respect paganism gives the earth," he says. "It provides a spiritual dimension to their environmental beliefs."

The Mind Body Spirit Myth

NoR

Physical reality is not what it appears to be, it is far stranger than many of the physicists and biologists currently appearing in the media have led the general public to believe. It is ironic that many scientists suffer from the complaint that they often level at people outside the official scientific community, which is, that they are not applying the scientific method of impartially examining all the evidence.

Discoveries at the cutting edge of quantum physics about the true nature of reality give radical, new and exciting insights into topics that many people may have considered the subject of metaphysical studies rather than the realm of science. Topics such as telepathy and "remote viewing" are too well researched and documented by renowned physicists such as Hal Puthoff and Russell Targ to be dismissed, and therefore must be incorporated into any scientific explanation of reality expressed by the scientific community.

A number of eminent physics professors have stated quite clearly that matter, energy and consciousness are the same thing, which would indicate that there cannot be the normally accepted three separate states of mind, body and spirit; a subject area that incorporates a huge section of books in all leading book shops.

The concept of matter, energy and consciousness being the same thing led physicist Hal Puthoff to reassess Albert Einstein's famous equation, $E=mc^2$. Puthoff states that we should think of Einstein's equation as a recipe for how much energy is required to give the appearance of matter, that is, the appearance of something 'solid'. This begs the question "is there actually such a thing as a 'solid' object"?

The new understanding of reality that is emerging provides a much more optimistic and liberating view of life and death that is neither bound up by the blind faith and superstition of religion, nor hindered by short-sighted and pessimistic materialism.

People may be aware that recent estimates by NASA say the universe is made up of 73% dark energy, 23% dark matter and only 4% atomic matter. This means that 96% of the universe is in a form that science has no explanation for at all.

However, since atomic matter is the only type of "stuff" whose properties science claims to know anything about, the situation for scientists is even more perplexing than that, because they really do not know what the 4% of so-called atomic matter is made of either.

This may come as a surprise to many people because they are accustomed to scientists speaking of "matter" as if they already knew it was some very small and solid "thing".

The importance of discovering the nature of "matter" has been clearly demonstrated by the amount of time, effort and money that has been spent on The Large Hadron Collider at Cern laboratories in Switzerland, which was switched on in September 2008.

Similarly, although people may be accustomed to scientists speaking of the "big bang" as the known origin of the universe, they may also be surprised to learn that this is still a theory, not a fact, and there is an increasing number of scientists stating that the current big bang theory does not hold up to scrutiny.

Consequently, compelling as it may at first seem, the materialist view of reality is simply not supported by the latest evidence, just as religion's view of an all powerful and loving creator god is not supported by evidence.

The traditional attitude is that there is only a choice between the "materialist" view or the "religionist" view of existence.

But this is not the case; it is time for a paradigm shift in thinking.

The world that seems so solid and separate from us has been shown by quantum physics to be a trick of the senses, as demonstrated by the physicist John Wheeler, a one-time colleague of Einstein, when he stated "useful as it is under everyday circumstances to say that the world exists 'out there' independent of us, that view can no longer be upheld".

Quantum physics can also show that the apparent materiality of the world is no more real than a dream-image; that consciousness is a vital element in understanding the true nature of reality.

There is much speculation about various levels of consciousness or altered states of consciousness, particularly under such topics as conscious creation, mind over matter and positive thinking.

However, one thing that has become apparent is that consciousness is not a by-product of the brain.

As Physicist Dr Jude Currivan has pointed out, "Despite a century of intensive research, science has been unable to produce any convincing evidence that consciousness is merely a product of the neurophysiological process in the brain."

Furthermore, the findings by physicist Alain Aspect and his colleagues in 1982 and more recently by Dr Nicolas Gisin in 1997 reveal a transcendent reality or hidden domain, which many physicists refer to as the "quantum vacuum" and ancient Sanskrit philosophy refers to as Akasha.

This indicates that the concepts of the nature of reality also apply to a realm beyond what would normally be considered "physical life".

It is a mistake to think that these concepts just belong in the domain of scientific theory or philosophy, because they have dramatic consequences, which are so far-reaching that they require you to reassess everything you thought you knew about yourself and your world.

Reality is far stranger than you can imagine.

Starseeds, Lightworkers & Soul Travellers

Rev. Judi A. Lynch

Sent to heal and awaken, they are highly creative, self-motivated visionaries who are extremely sensitive to negative energies. Working in many different professions, possessing a light energy that make them fast healers and fast learners, they have the ability to bounce back easily from anything. They are tapped into the "sources" that God sends to us to communicate, heal and learn. Plugged into the "matrix" as they say. Ascending faster all the time.

Lightworkers are empathetic and sympathetic which make them vulnerable to others who may try to "steal" their energy. Paying close attention they soak up information like a sponge. Humble but confident, sweet-natured and strong all at once. They live their lives expecting miracles because they know those miracles are possible. These are the souls who are dearly loved and deeply misunderstood at the same time.

This is because the Earth has turned so gray in places that other souls don't trust anyone or anything they deem too good to be true. This will change. As our thinking evolves and the Awakenings and Ascension continue, so will the understanding of the Lightworking Starseeds. They have the ability to channel information and energy from places we can only begin to imagine.

There is a Healing Light Energy here like never before that continues to grow all around us. One will awaken another who will awaken another...

Lure of the Craft

The easy art of wanting to know
 Magic around me
 Magic to bind me
the one study spare of tedious glow,
 Magic surround me
 Magic confound me

 the deeds to sing, the lore to ring, the spells to chant, to weave, to bind
the craft of spellbind and watch from winter to spring, the only art that all wish in kind...

The easy art of wanting to know
 Magic around me
 Magic to bind me
the one study spare of tedious glow,
 Magic surround me
 Magic confound me

 the apprentice is eager, though knowledge yet meager no one knows thirst as the young one the apprentice's hunger is beyond the limits to ponder no one can see how quickly learning's done...

The easy art of wanting to know
 Magic around me
 Magic to bind me
the one study spare of tedious glow,
 Magic surround me
 Magic confound me

were all that simple and desirous as the Craft, a spell to spark illusion or weave things to last,
 were it all that easy to want...
 the desire of the magic is a haunting savage that takes control of young minds and must be tamed...

The easy art of wanting to know
 Magic around me
 Magic to bind me
the one study spare of tedious glow,

Magic surround me
Magic confound me

were all learners that eager to go out and seek Her, Lady Magic,
to put their sorry ignorance to shame...

The easy art of wanting to know
Magic around me
Magic to bind me
the one study spare of tedious glow,
Magic surround me
Magic confound me

the devious mind,
quick to bind
the lure of lore
the scorch of wanting more,
the one book that one never sets down...
how simple to weave,
but for its smallness I grieve,
the apprentice wishes to know all!

The easy art of wanting to know
Magic around me
Magic to bind me
the one study spare of tedious glow,
Magic surround me
Magic confound me

from their strength, others shy away former nuisances hide behind locked gates and wait until young apprentice does pass... what a beauty, what a song may the Craft live long! may the journey down its treacherous road never end... let the strong learn fast
let the teachings last,
and let the apprentice
take wing of Mage...

THE ORDER OF WEB WEAVERS CRYSTAL WEB MAPPING PROJECT

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalogue your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly catalogued we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers

THE ORDER OF WORLD WALKERS

This Correllian order is headed by the Rev. Krystel High Correll and she is offering training for those who wish to join the order. The training consists of twelve lessons, one a month, for a year, offered through e-mail.

The purpose of this order is to fulfill the deeper purposes of the Correllian Tradition--advanced psychic and spiritual work, primarily conducted on multi-dimensional levels. This work includes:

Learning to connect and work with your spirit guides. Conscious dying and conscious incarnation. Advanced dream work. Exploring the known boundaries of the multi-dimensional universe, then conducting independent work to go beyond those boundaries. The study of time and advanced work within it. Soul rescue (helping those who are not aware they have died, or are not willing to cross over). Mediumship (being a voice for the so-called dead, visiting the land of the dead and communicating with them, and building a pathway between the living and the dead). Healing, both personal and of our Earth.

These purposes are divided among five houses that consist of the members who are dedicated to the work of the House.

The Order of World Walkers is a working order. The training is only the beginning. Each of the houses offer work that can be done for the rest of your life, if you choose to do it.

I believe that everyone who chooses to become a member of the order chose this before coming into this life time to continue work begun in other lives.

For more in-depth information, including the cost of the lessons, contact me at krystelneuman@yahoo.com

May You Blessed Be Krystel
